BATTLES IN THE CLOUDS DESCRIBED IN NARRATIVES AND NOVELS

The Making of George Groton

The big, outstanding thing that the editor of "Every Week" has done in this novel is to dramatize success in business and love—the false, flashy kind, and the real and lasting thing which only comes with the development of character.

Pieces of Eight

A modern hunt for buried treasure amid the strong salt breath of the tropical sea, the blue and milk-white waves, the coral grottoes of the Bahamas bound together with a perfectly charming love story.

Dramatic Moments in American Diplomacy

You know that the Kaiser was prepared to declare war on the United States in 1898, and that Admiral Dewey at Manila Bay frustrated his plans?

The Way Out of War

A very interesting contribution to the biological study of war, its causes and preventives. Sociology has made a failure of this question.

Ready April 29th Shandygaff

The "columnist" of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger calls his latest effusion "The By-Product of a Happy Youth," and says that he writes about brown eyes, tobacco, books, hay fever, the sorrows of commuters and the President of the United States.

Colour in My Garden

Mrs. Wilder is one of the few artist-writers in the country. She has rare taste and a practical working knowledge of plants which put her in the foremost rank of garden writers of the world.

Sign Talk

A universal signal code without apparatus, for use in the Army, Navy, camping, hunting and daily life. Besides giving 1,200 signs in use among the Plains Indians.

MARVELOUS EXPLOITS OF THE FIGHTING BIRDMEN

Told in Two Books of Personal Experience and in Two Novels Based on Facts—One of Them is Literature

"HAVE you seen the 'falling leaf' doctor?" said Owen as he settled himself in a comfortable chair opposite Doctor McFabe.

unaware. They are doing things every day which the exhibition differs before the war seldom attempted.

"I saw plenty of them last fall," the sergeant replied. "There are no falling leaves now except around the oaks when the new birds push the old leaves off."

"Then you ought to read the books," I went on. "For they tell in greater detail what the newspaper accounts have mentioned. You find them fascinating. If you are at all interested in flying, or if you can be thrilled by daring, I have just been reading four of them, all different. One is a record of personal experience, another is a general summary of what the aviators have done, the third is a novel written around a series of actual letters from a flier to his wife, and the fourth is in fiction form also, but is founded on the experiences of a young American in the air service."

should give him "The Adventures of Arnold Adair." It begins in a boy's school in Switzerland and ends with the meeting between Adair and Byrd for the Antarctic flight.

"The other narrative," I went on, "is written by Edgar Middleton, and it deals with the British flying men. It is an admirable summary of achievement. Mr. Middleton tells the story of one of the men who landed the Kump gun factory at Essen as well as the story of many other astonishing exploits. The man who flew to Essen had to make a non-stop run of 600 miles. He was in his machine for six hours. He lost his way in the clouds and had to follow his compass. It was so cold he was almost frozen, but he dropped his bombs and escaped the anti-aircraft guns."

Winning the Victoria Cross Deeds of heroism and bravery are thrillingly described in "Wonderful Stories of Winning the V. C. in the Great War."

A DISGRACE TO CIVILIZATION

The Treatment of Prisoners of War in Germany Intended to Kill Them

It would be difficult to describe in literature a book like "The Shame of a Princess." It is a record of the experiences of a soldier in a war which in its minutes death differs from every other.

Intrigues of Superspies

"Superspies" has been the most successful of the series, but has just been by a very narrow margin the thrilling story of the first novel.

"When I Dived Through a Cloud!"

FIVE thousand feet in air, I saw below me a cloud that looked as soft and fleecy as a pillow. I dived through it. And on the other side, as I came through, I saw two feet away—

Let the man who dived through tell you. He is a brave and gallant fighter, who, into his short young life, has crammed enough adventure to fill a thousand lives of other days.

Roberts is an American ace. He was two months in the wilds of Canada before he knew war was on. Then he heard—went straight to the front.

He has been a despatch rider; he has been in endless bombing expeditions; he has brought down eight German aeroplanes—for he is an "Ace." He has been gassed and wounded and shell-shocked; he was brought down from the air four times in four days by the Germans.

He has volumes and volumes to tell; to tell with a humor, a sincerity, a charm—as delightful as his keen face—as alert as his slim, athletic body.
