And there is organized. In February to get a drinking glass you find it occupied with spring flowers, what can blame a normal woman for thinkof summer hats?

Summer hats! This year a window shopping tour tells us they are as brevely gay as the fields themselves. And there is the nicest thing, One need not feel guilty looking at them or longing for them. For it has been whispered that wearing one of those delightful toques that look like popples is quite the particite thing. There are thousands of women in Paris who depend for their livelihood on the making of these artificial flowers.

BLOSSOMS of every sort grow on the hats. Yesterday I saw a little togic of drisles and violets. Suddenly came the urge for a vellow organide frock with a gay fluttering sask of white.

Next door to the daisy field was a leghern with just a lovely pink rose and a soft, soft the of the blike one nees in Eaphada's pickures. It is minded me—Are you thinking of the same thing I am? Just the very simplest little white foulard with sky bine coip spots. Not even an Etan Jacket. Just a quaint little bodies and tovely butterfly sash with the whole spirit of summer lied up in it—my word.

This knitting set, comprising three pieces-hat, apron and bagcomes in natural-colored linen, livened with embroidery in conventional design. The pockets on either side of the jumper are really very large tabs fashioned to hold one's knitting. The very attractive edging on the three pieces is a blanket stitch.

Sating beside me in the street car yesterday was a woman whose fingers were fairly flying as she wove the most beautiful clone slitches in the stocking she was looking about the car with seemingly no thought as to what her fingers were doing.

Knitting in public is not a strange sight—one sees it everywhere—but such careless indifference to the occupation and at the same time such perfect work was a marvel. When I expressed my admiration, she assured me that she really deserved no credit, but that she owed gratitude to her grandmother, who had taught her to knit when she was a child, harely old enough to hold the needles and from years of knitting the ends of her fingers had become so sensitive to the needles and the yarn that, instead of being sided by her eyes, she could do far better work if she relied entirely upon her series of touch.

This simply strengthens the adage, "Practice makes perfect," so the only now for the straggling beginner is in the lanting industry. The creating in the lanting industry of the straggling beginner is to the header of the could do far better work if she relied entirely upon her series of touch.
