The Giant is to blame," exclaimed The Giant is to blame," exclaimed the King. "He shot into as and wounded so many that we had to stay here to get well instead of feasting in the sich, beautiful, mossy marshes of our summer house in the marvelous northland. We start north today, but first we'd like to help you six the Giant. What are you going to do with blue?"

She called the King of the Wild Geeze apart and asked him if it could be today. First evided Fenzy.

helphess. Why bouldn't they hand the steeping Giant in the same war?

On a shelf beside the lamine was the Giant fishing the sign to the hammers, the green could take many lines. These linus could be tied to the hammers, the green could take hald of the other cuts and thus carry the Giant away.

"You might take him along with you and drop him there," suggested Peggy.

"We could if we had some way to carry him."

Mr. Swallow now came awooping down from the sky, where he had been doing scout duty.

"The Giant is asleep in his hammock," he reported.

"Good," said Peggy. "I'm soing back to his castle to see if I can figure out some way to capture him before he wakes up. Come along, every one, but he very quet."

So it was decided. Peggy found the Giant dwith this she stood on the hard with the Giant thrashing described him the carry him the term to the edges. To do this she stood on the back of Bine Heron, using him as a moving sonfold.

So it was decided. Peggy found the Giant will be instituted and with this she stood on the hard head smashed into the there is the them to the edges.
