YPRES is safe, as the armies of the Entente have held the Germans at bay. General von Arnim's sacrifice of his men has been in vain. The German failure at Verdun has repeated itself on the northern sector.

It would be a mistake, however, to assome that the Germans are defeated about Ypres or that the Entente armies are finally victorious. The advantage, so far as any has accrued, lies with the Germans, for they have taken a large slice of France. But they have not broken through.

In spite of the great sacrifice of life. the general situation remains unchanged. There has been a shifting of the trench lines and that is about all the physical connge that has taken place.

But in spite of the deadlock, the great Picardy battle must have a heavtenion ffect on all the nations fighting the Kai er. We know now that France and England are strong enough to hold the ines until America can sead her men in adequate numbers to affect the result. The man-power of Germany and Austria is limited. The drain open it cannot go on forever. There must come a time when the size of the armies the Kniser can put in the field will become smaller and smaller. America along can muster as big a force as Germany and Austria together at their best. This force, com-bined with the French and English, will he sufficient to compel a decision on the battlefield. The morale of Germany from now on is bound to suffer progressive deterioration, for the fact that America is really in the war can no longer be concealed from the German, people. When our soldiers first same in contact with the Gers mans they insisted that our men were Englishmen in disguise, "For," suid they, "the Kniver has told us that the submacines would make it impossible for America to send any troops to Europe." The failure of the submission compaise is bound to react upon German continents and as the fact becomes generally known throughour Gegmuny that Americans in increasing numbers are reaching France corry-week and taking their places lu the trenches the war will enter on its final stuge. We must not count on German demoralization, but must assume that we are fighting an aler) and hopeful army confident of altimate victory. There is to prospect of success otherwise)

Neither must we be deceived by talk of peace, which is bound to be heard in the near future, following the German failure at Ypres. Such tall has been out attoat after every check in the German advance. The Germans are playing a game of seesaw. First they try peace by decisive victories and then they try for peace by negotiation. Plausible and sophistical propositions for peace without indemnities and without annexations--ave where the people 'want to be annexed"-will be launched. Some weaklings will be ready to make peace on any terms in order that the slaughter may cease. But the rest of us know that a German peace would be only the preliminary to more slaughter in the future and are convinced that there is no sufety for any nation so long as the German army can lay down, its weapons with a reputation for invincibil ity at home. Witness Russia and Rus

In the meantime, the lighting will go on. An attempt will be made to break through at another point.
