YES IT WILL ALL COME OUT IN THE WASH—IN MAYTIME

You Can't Live on Violets or the Warm, Lovely Touch of the Sun, but, Oh, How High They Make You Fling Your Spirit in the Face of Things Gone Wrong!

IT IS an absurd way to feel about it, I suppose. But nothing material really matters in Maytime. It is the month when things are bright and sunny and the day before yesterday. Suzanne, whose services in the interior decorating shop went into the office and office and cried. And then she put on her hat and went out—to the arms of May. It was five minutes later that I met her. "How goes it, Suzanne?" I asked. "It doesn't go," she said. "I have just been relieved of my honest-to-goodness job. And before I had a chance to ask why or how she went whithering. "I was shocked to pieces at first. Shamed as though a brick house had fallen on me. Went into the back office and wept a little. And then I came out here. Suzanne looked around at the green city square. "And, honestly, it just seems to me as if I'm flying. Why it just occurred to me I was in more or less of a rut anyhow, I'd never had the courage to leave for fear of not making anything of myself. And now—why, who knows but that this might be the making of me!"

ADVENTURES WITH A PURSE

ROSE AND GRAY ROOM WAS MADE AT HOME

The Old Oaken Bed got a Coat of Paint and Some Cretonne Did the Rest

THREE days of fair winds and magic transformations by the mere wave of a wand have departed to return no more. Never again will the rubbing of a lamp suggest an interesting scene, wish change a few drops into diamonds, nor was white mice to flapping steeds.

But while the rubbing of a lamp in these days of scientific facts does little more than impart a certain luster to the surface, the rubbing down and painting of that old bedroom set of oak or maple will transform it into a self-respecting suite of furniture. It will result in a more cheerful guest chamber or extra room. No longer need you keep the door shut to the room that you have been waiting to refurbish until the demands on your purse were less. Here is what one woman did to a "bluebeard" set with purely matched furniture and oak bed.

A can of paint was pitched and by the simple process of rubbing down and painting up there emerged a well-mated bed, bureau and rocker of dull gray finish. Careful hangings of old rope which were secured at extraordinary low price in a carefully chosen adventure stood guard on either side of sheer window curtains of cream-colored net, and were reflected in a ring of blending shades which a short time later covered among a very moderately priced assortment.

Well-colored prints in dull gl finishes and but two in number, for the room

AMERICAN MEDICAL WOMEN IN FRANCE

EDITORIAL FOR WOMEN BY A WOMAN

By ALICE WELD TALLANT

Let no medical woman be deterred from attempting the work in devastated France, no matter what gloomy probabilities there may be.

The need for medical work among the people of the war-torn regions would seem to be self-evident. The fact that the French Government sent to the front a unit of medical women is evidence of this.

These gloomy probabilities came to me recently. The first of these was the fact that the French Government had sent to the front a unit of medical women.
