

OUR BROOM READY FOR CLEAN-UP WEEK

Make Dirt Fly in Homes and Streets, Starting Monday

The entire populace of the city has been concentrated for the weekly drive on dirt, which will start Monday morning, the beginning of the annual "Clean-up Week."

The drive will both go "over the top" and "under the bottom" of the broom and corner will be searched; every street and alley will be cleaned. The drive will be thorough in every respect.

Contractors in charge of the city rubbish-removing contracts are prepared to uphold their end. Ample provision has been made for extra equipment and the prompt and effective removal of all materials put out by house owners.

The condition of Philadelphia's streets has been frequently commended, with special stress on the disease-breeding opportunities afforded by the filth.

"The streets are disgraceful," said Dr. W. W. Keen, now a major in the army. They should be cleaned—must be cleaned—and clean-up week will afford an excellent opportunity for the operation.

Brigadier General L. W. T. Waller, major corps, is another enthusiastic booster of the clean-up movement.

"Clean-up week" will cause the city an additional expense of $200,000. When contracts were drawn up for the disposal of rubbish at the beginning of the year a special clause was inserted, providing that if the roads were not forced to pay extra for the removal of dirt and rubbish during "Clean-up Week," hereafter the extra expense incurred by the city has been as high as $200,000.

"We are ready," said Director Dattner, of the Department of Public Works. "All that is necessary to make the week successful is the co-operation of the householder."

"The disposal of dirt and rubbish tends to the elimination of mosquitoes and flies. On this account, if for no other reason, I hope that every householder will see to it that the accumulations of the cellar or the yard are placed out for collection."

"We are prepared to do the biggest kind of job in the most effective way, and the bigger it is and the more effective it is the more good it means to the city generally."

WHEN I returned by many visits from King Albert and Queen Elizabeth, Her Majesty used to walk around the wards, preceded by officers carrying piles of cigarettes, chocolates and flowers for the soldiers. She was always very simply dressed and her manners were equally simple.

"DREAMLAND ADVENTURES" By DADDY "THE MAD GIANT"

CHAPTER VI The Escape of the Giant

Peggy having planned the kidnapping of the Giant of the Woods by the Wild Geese, and having sealed up their cave to the Giant with their captive, suddenly remembered that she has fastened the Geese as securely to the Giant hat at their journey's end as they were to catch up with them.

FASTER than she had ever flown before, Peggy sped in pursuit of the Wild Geese and the captive Giant of the Woods. She pressed forward in her airplane, trying in every way she knew to urge it on. What if she couldn't catch up with them? What if she couldn't find them? The space of the sky was so vast! The chances of going astray were so many!

On and on she went, growing more fearful every minute. In her imagination she could see the Giant becoming exhausted, floundering to the ground and falling victim to the triumphant Giant. Her only hope was that she would drop in the water, for then the Giant would be drowned.
