The Americans have settled to their work like veterans. They go about it quietly and soberly. Although brandy is obtainable in the French villages, our boys do not seem to want to drink; they have excite-ment enough. They are steady under shellfire, very ready with their rifles, and have learned to hide in a rabbit warren it a shell hole is not available. Everybody is surprised to see the Americans so entirely amenable to discipline, their temperament having been heretofore rated rebellious. "The measure will be completed this week and introduced in the House of Commons early next week. The Gov-ernment intends to press it forward with vigor and to stake its existence on its passing." Field Marshal French, though born in England, comes of an Irish family and is a knight of the Most Illustrious Order of St. Patrick. He succeeds as Viceroy Baron Wimborne, who was ap-pointed Lord Lieutenant in 1915, serving to May, 1916, and was reap-pointed the following August, after the Dublin revolt. In connection with that uprising. Lord Wimborne gave testimony before the investigating commission, which later absolved him from responsibility for the outbreak. Austria's determination to take measures against the Slavonic agitation in Bohemia, indicated in the dispatches from Copenhagen, may bring to a head the political conflict that has been rag-ing for months between the Slavic and German elements in Emperor Charles's realm. A severe policy of repression has been demanded by the Germans, and Count Czernin, the recently deposed Foreign Minister, went so far as to say that the treasonable Czechs should be
