

"The CRACK in THE BELL"

A Story Written About Philadelphia, Exclusively for Philadelphians, Teeming With Personality; Dealing Impartially With the City's Socially Elect, and Its Submerged Tenth

By PETER CLARK MACFARLANE

Certainly the greatest political writer in the United States and probably America's greatest novelist—a man whose name stands first in the bright lexicon of the book of present day letters.

DAY in and day out for months the towering figure of this writer, noted for his absolute impartiality, for the fairness of his pen, has threaded the purlieus of the Fifth Ward, has examined the documents of record concerning the high crimes and misdemeanors committed in the name of the city's government.

Into the highways, the byways, the alleys and the thoroughfares of the city he has gone seeking out those who live the slinking life of the furtive criminal; holding conversation with men in high places, getting at the truth of the crime that shocked all Philadelphia.

This man, who penned that engrossing story of Americanism, "Held to Answer," has given his whole time, his whole thought, his whole care to the evolution of a story suggested by fact—permeated with truth; absolutely, convincingly true, and now he has completed a great work for the men and women of Philadelphia to read.

Thousands of Philadelphians have read "Held to Answer," but hundreds of thousands will read, with consuming interest, this new serial story which so intimately describes the industrial, social and political affairs of their own city.

It will be published exclusively in the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER beginning Saturday, May 11

Whatever else you do, be certain to read the first installment of this wonderful story and you will await the remaining issues eagerly, impatiently.
