Miss Miriam Kane Will Speak This Afternoon at the Home of Mrs. Harrison Koons Caner-Nancy Talks of Other Matters

THERE was quite an interesting time this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harrison Koons Caner, 1707 Walnut street, The musical records and games committee of the National League for Woman's Service sent out invitations to hear Miriam Kane tell about her work and experiences abroad. Miriam went over nearly two years ago, first to work with the Secours Duryea, in Paris, and later she spent seven months at the Lighthouse with Miss Holt, and it was of her later experiences that she told. She is greatly interested in the French soldiers who have been blinded in battle and has done some wonderful work among them.

I should think she would be a great help in the organization of that work here in this country, and I understand there is a big movement on now to prepare for those men who will have given their eyes for their country, wonderful, brave souls! It was a most interesting afternoon,

There was music by Miss Helen Buchanan. Miss Bessie Phillips, Miss Naomi Ersner and Miss Joline and the "Lot of Pep" orchestra also contributed to the afternoon's pleasure.

The proceeds from a basket collection will be divided between the record and games committee and the French blinded soldiers. The record and games committee of the National League for Woman's Service was formed at the suggestion of Miss Sarah Bache Hodge. Mrs. Peregrine Wilmer is chairman. Miss Hodge vice chairman, Miss Clarissa Townley Chase treasurer, and Mrs. J. Howe Adams secretary. while the other members of the committee include Mrs. William Field, Mrs. Joseph Lucas, Miss Green and Mrs. Clinck.

THE next excitement is the Flower Market, and that's to be a bit later than usual this year, May 24 being the day chosen. It makes one think of beautiful Mrs. Large, who started the idea three years ago and whom death claimed but a short r onth ago.

THE Garden Club, which has the Farm Unit of Newtown Square under its special care, will hold a meeting at the Hopkins farm, at Newtown Square, which is the unit's headquarters, on Thursday, May 16, and the executive committee has invited all the executive committees of the four other farm units to the meeting and for afternoon tea. I imagine it will be rather interesting, to say the least. One wonders how the women of today can accomplish all they undertake to do. But they do, and do mighty well. My hat is off to them! And really there's very little fuss and feathers about it all. Of course, there are some few who go into any work with a bit of an ulterior motive-to get to know others better-something like that, you know, but their number is so few, and their purpose so evident in these cases very little notice is taken of it all. These are the days for work, not for social am-

AND now hold your ear very close. How I wish I could tell you. But I can't. However, this much I will divulge. There is a girl in town whom you know and I know. She's very pretty and sweet and has had a lot of attention. She has had quite an ordeal in her life (if I told you what the ordeal was you'd know who I'm talking about right off, so I can't tell that either) and she was pronounced a small brick by those who knew how she stood that ordeal.

Well, she's engaged! She is, I'm as sure as sure can be, but I can't tell. Why? Well. war is over. I fear that will be some time to wait, and so she may relent before long and let me tell. Now I guess you'd like to know a tiny bit more, wouldn't you? Well, he's not an American. But he's very attractive and quite a few damsels have been greatly attracted by him, and he apparently to them, till along came K---, and then good night for every one else. se had no eyes for any other. If you should chance to guess, remember you must not tell, for I promised I wouldn't.

TN THE midst of the dearth of entertaining it's like a breath of an early spring morning to have a future bride-to-be of another city visit in this. For, then, people feel they have a right to do a little entertaining, and in consequence Dorothea Karow is having quite a beautiful time in a quiet way. She is staying with her future mother-in-law. Mrs. Richard Edwards, and the Heide Norrises gave, a dinner for her on Tuesday night and the Howdy Hansells will have a small one this evening. Several of Tim's relatives will give teas and luncheons for her, and altogether there's quite a little doing.

HE IS just fifteen, you know, but very manly; oh! very. Attentive to older ladies, too, and, in fact, is quite the gentleman. Big sister had a friend who had several small boys and one day when talking to big sister she said: "I just want Jimmie to grow up like David. He's always so polite to old ladies and has so many fine qualities. I'd like to study him and find out his point of view about things." There was a general laugh, and when big sister went home she told her mother that really it was funny how crazy Edith was about Dave. Dave came in while the conversation was going on, and sister said:

"Oh, Dave, Mrs. D- says she wants to borrow you for a while; she wants to bring up Jimmie to be like you. You must have been polite over there or something! But brother wouldn't tease, he simply smiled benevolently and said: "All right. I'll give her some pointers. I'll tell her what to NANCY WYNNE. avoid."

CHAPTER LIN Searching for Values UP THE narrow stairs to my studio came of varied buildness on my door.

Bobby MacAllistan jed the mob. They settled themselves like sparrows. Here, on the Square,

"Movelli/had rather a flair for you, didn't he?"
But I denied this with taughing firmness. Gradually they thinned out. Only Bobby MacAllystair was sitting at my feet. But I hade no attempt to be entertaining. He too, was gone. Now I can think. Try to put things in their proper place.

Almost haif of my year is gone. What lave I accomplished? Something, yes. But A am no nearer my goal than I was then.

I have seen several phases of life. The rich of the city. The simple well-to-do of the country. And now Bobenia. I have met many men. Some have flirted with me. Some have taught me how to look out for myself, to trust my instinct. One has said. "Know thyself." Two men have asked me to marry them: but one I could not. For one I did not care. And last—there was my friend who died.

I held my throbbing temples a moment. I saw again that spiritual face.

Morelli: I hate the name! He, too, is gone; gone the way of the Square.

I am not a natural Bohemian. I am a normal girl. I still believe somewhere there is a man who would care for me. And I for him. But where? Not here.

There that I have met here do not stand for the simple things that I love. For the first time I wonder if the ideas I have imbibled so freely lately are right. Are they unbalanced?" as Tom said. Are they unbalanced?

If, as Norma Carews says, that these propie are the repudiation of all normal things, then what am I doing here? I am wasting time. Part of my one, precious year. My money, too, is fast going. Of my five hundred dollars I have but two hundred and fiftleft. How did I let it slip through my fingers so? Yet as I go through my accounts I find few extravagances, only necessities. Food has been so high.

I must find some way out. Do something and soon.
