No change in Philadelphia's car fare will result from the action of the new contract...

Special Cable to Evening Public Ledger Copyright, 1918, by the New York Times Co.

When asked what he thought of the new contract, Dr. Lewis said: "I do not think about it at all."

"It is one of the smartest and cleanest bits of naval work we have had in modern times."

"If this fare increase is based entirely on the wage increase, it is fair."

Joseph P. Gaffney, chairman of Councils finance committee, likewise was reticent.

OSTEND "BOTTLING UP" CAUGHT FOE UNAWARE

Special Cable to Evening Public Ledger Copyright, 1918, by the New York Times Co.

The brilliant operation at Ostend last night, when an attempt was made to close the entrance to the harbor by sinking across it the obsolete concrete-filled cruiser Vindictive, was, according to the testimony of those who returned to this port after taking part in it, equally as successful as that at Zebrugge.

BUSINESS CAREER OF PETER FLINT

A Story of Salesmanship by Harold Whitehead

LXXXV A SALESMAN from Barker & Banks (the hardware jobbers) was called on old man Minton today. I was working on the back counter and couldn't help hearing what they said...

"Noting that will interest you particularly," Mr. Minton said. "By the way, I am afraid I will have to ask you to cut this order a bit."

"Wait a minute," said the salesman, holding up his hand. "It isn't that your credit is not good for more than $500, but it's all your business can stand."

"You're in business to make profit," snapped the old man. "I thought I was well enough known to you people without being dunned for a paltry hundred dollars."

"You give me 2 per cent if I pay in ten days, thirty days net," said the salesman. "Well, as I take my full time limit, I lose my discount, so you make all that profit, don't you?"

"Yes, Mr. Minton; but we don't want you to lose all your discounts, because we have to pay your debt, and every other customer we are acting as your banker and you know we are not bankers, we are hardware jobbers."

"I don't see how that was radically wrong. The thought occurred to me that possibly this man, through his friendship with the President, had obtained authority which makes him doubly dangerous to the interests of the country, in that he might remove from activity those people now responsible for the industrial development of aircraft without a lapse of substituting in their stead a new working force."

Mix, according to his declaration, decided to drop the project immediately. (It is to be noted that Borglum had learned far he would be willing to use his position to further a private interest. He, accordingly, was not to be identified with the organization, but would have to be represented by Mr. Harris.)

The following day, the statement says, Mix advised the fact that he was in the Government authorities and did so. The correspondence concludes with letters from Borglum saying that Washington was "watchful but waiting for time" and the "idea should be rushed to the limit" and from Giltson that "we three should have little difficulty in assembling a satisfactory ability for a large productive program."

COMEBACK AT

Will Answer Colonel's Charge of "Persecution" of Certain Publications

Washington, May 11.—The Roosevelt-Burleson controversy began to give off sparks today. Postmaster General Burleson, replying to a hot comeback to "attack" on Collier's will be treated "extraneous" and "not involving postoffice."

This reply, which will be made public today, will make categorical answer to Roosevelt's charges. Roosevelt's mention of George Crook's "attack" on Collier's will be treated "extraneous" and "not involving postoffice."

Colonel Roosevelt was on record yesterday with a brief statement, in which he declared the Postoffice Department had shown favoritism in attacking Collier's, the Metropolitan Magazine and the New York Tribune for criticisms of the Administration, while the Hearst publications—which Roosevelt said had helped to Roosevelt—had not been interfered with.

Roosevelt's statement was in reply to a challenge by Collier's, which had published the publications in an editorial, he accused the Government of showing unjust discrimination in its dealings with certain periodicals.

The prime example of failure by the Administration to proceed against newspapers which opposed the war or attacked our allies, or indirectly, indirectly aided Germany is afforded by the fact that the Administration to deal with the Hearst papers as it has dealt with certain other papers. Mr. Hearst is a wealthy man, reputed to be worth more than a million, owning a dozen newspapers more or less and a half a dozen magazines in different parts of the country.

Roosevelt then cited a number of editorials from the Hearst papers printed before and after this country entered the war, which he declared were intended to "pander to anti-English prejudice in the interest of our foes" and "excite hatred between the United States and England."

EXPECT INDICTMENT TODAY

Grand Jury to Act in Murder of McClellan Soldier

Gadsden, Ala., May 11.—Some time today the grand jury of Etowah County is to say upon what charge William Washburn is stand trial for killing Friday of last week Harry Hays Holman, a cook in Company L, 12th Infantry. The grand jury completed inquiry into the circumstances yesterday afternoon.

In the event that the grand jury finds that the murder is possible, Washburn will be arraigned on Friday before Judge James Blackwood, who will be in the city on Friday. Being made in view of the always existing possibility that the troops at Gadsden, Ala., may be moved.
