

Junior Music Club Has Delightful Afternoon—Mr. Radcliffe Introduces Mrs. Egan at Red Cross—Nancy Has Other Things to Say

REALLY, those recitals by the Junior Music Club of the Main Line are quite remarkable. One of the series was held on Saturday afternoon at the Burton Chances at Radnor. The first arrangement was to have the party at the Benedicts, but the Benedicts' boy developed measles and so Mrs. Chance came to the rescue and offered her house for the concert, as it was deemed better to hold it in a post-pone it.

me so ashamed today." Peggy was just as affectionate as she was impetuous, and to see her mother sorrowful made her very sad. Putting her hand softly she murmured sympathetically: "It is too bad, mother. It hurts me, too, that you are such a dreadful failure."

Classical and modern music was the theme of the afternoon, and indeed it was a most creditable performance. It was opened by a short foreword by Carroll Spencer, followed by the playing of Mozart's Minuet No. 1 by Conway Clark. Two duets for harp and violin by Pergolesi and Handel were played by Helen and Florence Michell; Anne Ashton, Dorothy Hodge and Helen Chance gave a trio for the harp, cello and violin by Johann Bach, and Helen Chance played a cello solo, "Sarabande," by Handel. Rowland Roberts, Andrew Foster and James Pennypacker also showed remarkable talent in their rendition of violin, cello and piano solos.

"UNIVERSITY WEEK'S" FEATURES NUMEROUS

Hey-Day Will Be Celebrated Wednesday With "Cremation" of Popular Sophs

"Hey-Day," the annual day of merry making at the University of Pennsylvania, will be celebrated Wednesday, with sports and other festivities.

The sophomore cremation at 9 o'clock in the evening will bring a climax to the student celebration. Then three University professors, who aroused the greatest dislike in the 1929 class during the year, will be burned in public.

Early in the evening the yearlings will assemble behind a band and snake-dance over to Franklin Field, where a bonfire will be built and the cremation of the sophomores will begin. The spirit of the cremation will be exactly the reverse of former ones, and the most popular sophomores have been chosen. Several athletic events will take place.

All-University chapel opens Hey-Day on town Wednesday. A military review is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock on Franklin Field. A baseball game between the varsity and navy yard teams takes place at 3:30, with the selection of varsity cheer leaders.

May day sports between Freshies and Sophs at 7:10 o'clock will be followed by a freshman bonfire. At 9 o'clock comes the sophomore cremation.

On Hey-Day the seniors will commence wearing their academic caps and gowns to classes, reviving an old Pennsylvania custom.

Thursday's program provides for a junior-senior luncheon at noon, sops-fresh sports at 4:30 o'clock and senior singing in the Triangle in the evening, followed by the Franklin Society smoker at Houston Club, with George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, as the guest of honor.

Hunting a Husband

CHAPTER LXIII The Empty House I HAVE done what my wise little old lady advised. I have opened the house. And worked. I have cleaned and dusted and scrubbed. The little sitting-room looks bright and fresh. Now the shrouded pictures smile down at me, uncovered. I have filled the hallway with late asters. Even the brass wood-box gleams up at me from the hearth. I sit upon my little old blue taffeta. And I sit looking into the red glow of my grate fire. But it is so lonely—so empty. The hard work made me forget, today. Now I can even think of the Square as some strange, dreamy interlude. Think, too, of my sick man without the sudden clutch of pain at my heart. Away from the dancing lights of the fire, the room is dark, eerie. I could almost feel the bell rang with a long steady sound. I jumped to my feet with a startled cry. But when I had opened the door I saw Tom smiling at me out of the darkness. "So it's you, Sara," he said, giving my hand a hearty shake. "Mother was out and the light under your shades. And she asked me to look into it." "Sorry I can't be a burglar. Tom, to suit you," I answered. We drew our chairs up before the little fire. "Mind if I smoke, Sara?" Tom took out his familiar pipe. "This looking at me, he burrs into his ringing laugh. "I beg pardon," he said. "I forgot you're the latest thing in women!" "You big tease," I answered. "You know just as well as I that I'm through with it all. That sham-new womanism." Even in the flickering shadows, I saw Tom's face change. "I am glad, Sara," he said. "I was mighty afraid you would ruin yourself the last time I saw you. Why, Sara, you'll make a splendid wife for some man. But would you care to see you turn into the bobbed-hair new-cut type of girl?" Tom didn't stay long that evening. He had just "dropped in." But long after he had left me, I felt a little glow at my heart. "A splendid wife for some man!" "A splendid wife for some man!" "But whom and when?"

VENEZUELAN WILDS PENN SAVANT'S GOAL Expedition Under Leadership of Theodore de Booy Leaves for South America

An expedition to explore the Sierra Paria range of mountains in Venezuela, not far from Lake Maracaibo, under the leadership of Theodore de Booy, assistant curator in the American section of the University of Pennsylvania Museum, has left for South America.

This high range juts into Colombia, and is utterly unexplored and the character of its natives unknown. Ever since white men discovered the region 400 years ago, strange tales have been told of these Indians, who never come down to the plains.

They live in high altitudes through which no trade routes pass, and consequently they never have been visited. It is reported that there is a white tribe there.

It may be that these are Arawaks or Caribs, and it is possible they belong to prehistoric tribes which have been isolated there for many centuries. It is well known that present tribes in all of South America are comparatively modern and that a thousand years or more ago entirely different races occupied much of South America. It is hoped by University officials that Mr. de Booy can throw light on many unsolved problems in South American ethnology and archeology.

Mr. de Booy was born in the Virgin Islands, educated in Denmark, and for ten years has been an archeological explorer in South America and the islands of the Caribbean Sea. He will explore the regions where Indians still live in houses on stilts or piles and which have the name of Yucatan or Little Venice to that country. He hopes to get important results.

The trip will last six months, and if Mr. de Booy develops promising fields of exploration a larger expedition is likely next year.

ANOTHER FLOWER MARKET Scranton to Have Benefit for Home for Friendless on May 24

May 24 seems to be a general date for "market" the annual flower market at Bitternook Square and the May market in Vernon Park, Germantown, will both be on that day, and word has been received that arrangements are being made for the various committees and there will be fine garden plants on sale at the garden booth. In these days of H. C. U. desert as well as fresh vegetables for the children and old ladies at the home for their frugal means are a rarity. By patronizing the market the charitable people of the county have an opportunity to help provide good, wholesome food and an occasional luxury at the institution, which has to depend on the generosity of the public for existence.
