Both were turned down for deafness. It might be said here that both are not in the draft but because of this failing neither would have been accepted for service and because of this they volunteered.

When they got to France Hamilton was immediately called "Ham" by the other Americans and as Ham and Boyd were buddies the Americans named them "Hams and Eggs" and this name stuck to them.

were thirty-six Americans in the section and all volunteered, and twelve trucks, with two men on the trucks, were picked, Boyd and Hamilton being among those selected.

It was very dangerous work, for a ball of shells fell all around them. Not a muniton truck was hit by a shell, but a French officer and three men were killed and a number of men were wounded.

After the Americans got into the big war the pair signed up with the American Red Cross, and for two months they drove hospital supplies from Paris to a section of the French front that shall be nameless.

No matter what the Phils do today, their secret will be safe until tomorrow.

All telegraph wires, east of Pittsburgh are virtually out of commission and communication with St. Louis can only be obtained by stage coach or inland waterways lines.

J. S. Myrick Appeals to Tennis Players to Give Balls and Other Paraphernalia for Overseas Forces and in Camps

New York, May 13.

This call to give men in the service a chance to enjoy tennis puts it up to us to see that they get what they want. It is not a call to do our bit, but to do our best.

In these words Julius S. Myrick, vice president of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, closes an appeal addressed to its members for supplies to equip 400 tennis courts.

Some equipment is available, but for the most part the camps are entirely without adequate supplies of nets, balls and rackets.

Every club has at least one net which it can send, says the letter, and a search would doubtless reveal several. And rackets—everyone has a 'bat' that can be strung up and made to help Uncle Sam.

Balls form one of the main items, put in a box where your players can drop the ones they have used and arrange to have some one collect these regularly and forward them.

With all its club being urged to provide equipment for camps here, it is hoped that the home needs will be quickly met. The physical directors are quick to respond.
