Ferment Continues Following Great Naval Uprising in February

RED FLAG HOISTED

Special Cable to Evening Public Ledger

London, May 14. The London Times correspondent with the Italian army says that news is trickling through to Italy from time to time about the great mutiny in the Austrian fleet early in February, and It is possible now to give a fairly ac curate idea of what happened. The mutiny began at Pola, but, as it broke out almost simultaneously at Cattaro. It looks as if there had been collusion between the two ports. It was among the arsenal workmen that the rising began at Pola. They demanded the abolition of various disciplinary measures and punishments inflicted both on shipboard and ashore. The move ment soon spread to the ships in the harbor. The crews left their posts and thronged the decks, shouting, hurrah-ing and acting as they pleased. Their officers were powerless, but there seems to have been no fighting be-tween them and the men.

The naval authorities parleyed with the men for a week and finally all the sailors' and workmen's demands were granted.

At Cattaro the mutiny took a more serious turn. Six crulers and several destroyers hoisted the red flag. The German and Magyar elements in some German and Magyar elements in some crows held aloof, and there were encounters between them and the mutineers being turned on another, and some mutineers got the upper hand after three days and became masters of the port. The officers were selzed, the admiral commanding being taken by the sailors from his flagship to confinement in a vessel in the harbor, where he received apparently no very gentle treatment.

Multineers in Charge

The mutineers gave all orders affoat or ashore. These were printed and signed "The committee of the crows" The wireless apparatus was seized and the sailors' committee thus communicated to Vienna its demands, among which that for the immediate conclusion of peace was prominent.

Alarm was claused by these measures.

Alarm was caused by these measures and conciliatory but noncommittal replies were sent. After many prolonged discussions the authorities in Vienna decided to dispatch to Cattaro a division of the fleet under a German special Austrian admiral, upon which it was thought that reliance might be placed When this appeared before Cattaro the position was critical, as murmurings had broken out in the new division.

The situation was saved by the Teutonic element in one of the revolting cruisers in the harbor getting free and hauling down the red flag. Negotiations were opened on an equal footing between the admiral and the mutineers and finally the latter consented to surrender the vessels on receiving written guarantees that no action would be taken against any man, and that a number of the grievances would be settled. The Cattaro fleet then returned to its allegiance after having been in open revolt for eight ving been in open revolt for eight

Officers Dismissed

Officers Dismissed

In consequence of the mutiny, Emperor Charles cashiered a number of high officers on the ground that it was their slackness that had permitted the outbreak. Thirty of these are believed to have been retired. The fleet has been put under the command of a notoriously severe and much-disliked admiral. Efforts were made later to revoke the amnesty so the mutineers, and they have been severely punished, supposedly for subsequent offenses, but nothing has been done publicly, as most of Austria's sailors belong to the suppressed races.

There is no doubt that the ferment continues in the fleet, as well as in the army.

VIENNESE FALL DEAD IN CAPITAL'S STREETS

Lendon, May 14.—A dispatch to the Times from Milan says that two Italian persons who were made prisoners by the Austrians in a hospital near Gradisca while the October retreat was in progress have been permitted to return to Italy. They say that present conditions in Vienna are almost insupportable. Deaths from exhaustion continually occur in the streets and a physician told them that 2000 persons were buried daily in the principal cemetery.

Socialist and Polish deputies in Austria have telegraphed a protest to Premier Seydler against the requisitioning and importation of Galician foodstuffs, according to advices received at Berne today.

Experts here take the view that it is only possible for the Germans to draw additional man-power from one or the other of two sources. Either Mackensen must bring another 500,000 men from the so-called Russian from the Austrians must be infront or the Austrians must be in-duced to send to the western front at

The enemy's difficulty, it is believed, is that the Central Empires cannot come to an agreement on the question. The Germans realize that if they withdraw their available men from the Russian front they will be unable to insure that such grain sup-plies as they may obtain from those regions will not fall into Austrian hands. The Austrians, on the other hands. The Advantage of the other hand, are much too hungry to deprive themselves, by sending their surplus men to the western front, of the only possible chance of keeping out of German hands what they regard as their legitimate share of Russian spoils in
