ROSE was a milliner, Hettie was a dressmaker and Edith was a stenographer in a big office downtown...

"I had a letter from Uncle Abner yesterday," announced Hettie from her comfortable position on the couch...

"I am enclosing a little horridly-remembered note from Aunt Sara and myself," said Edith, who had just come in...

"When I hear a letter like that," said Edith, "I almost wish I lived out of town, somewhere, and could be a farmer."

"Not a farmer—a farmerette," corrected Edith, who had just come in from the city...

"I don't care to be a farmerette," said Edith, who had just come in from the city...

CHAPTER II General Hopper Is Captured

General Hopper and his Frog army, having been defeated by the Snake army, are on the march to a new position...

PEGGY flew back to Frog Island and found General Hopper on a high rock where he could view his entire forces...

"With this wonderful army I can conquer the earth," he boasted loudly as Peggy alighted beside him...

"It is true," agreed Peggy, "but have you seen the Snake army?"

"No, but I'm sure it can't compare with mine. Just wait and see how they come when we come hopping and croaking at them."

"If they run I'm afraid they'll run toward you. What will you do then?"

"I'll just wait and see how strong we are. They'll surely break it."

"You mean to say you're afraid of the Snake army?"

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

"I'm not afraid of the Snake army. I'm afraid of the Snake army."

And away Mr. Swallow flew for the Giant's castle.

"Oh, I haven't any regular plan," he answered at last. "We'll just pitch into 'em and lick 'em."

Peggy was getting more and more disgusted over his stupidity. She wondered how he had been made leader of the Frogs...

"We must have a plan," she declared. "Let's try to make our losses as small as possible."

"You can hop, hop, hop. Not your top, top, top. Not a bit, but, well, well."

Bob Olink explained the matter to General Hopper. "The Frogs have gone to war in a good cause—the freedom of the world..."

"I can fight!" blustered General Hopper. "Show me any Snake I catch with..."

"Quick! Rescue him!" cried Peggy. The Birds fluttered farther into the grass and fled...

"At that King Fisher darted down like a flash. He seized the Blacksnake by the tail and struggled upward..."

"General Hopper didn't wait to see this. The instant he found himself free he took a mighty leap from the edge of the cliff and dived well out into the river..."

"Hurrah!" cried Peggy, as she saw the Blacksnake drop over the cliff. "Now I know how we'll conquer the Snake army, but we'll need the Giant of the Woods to help us."

"And away Mr. Swallow flew for the Giant's castle."

(In the next chapter Peggy visits the Giant and meets Billy Belotom for the first time.)

varied and marveled at the man's varied knowledge of racial idiosyncrasies. He crossed one leg over the other and flicked the ash of his cigarette on to the carpet...

"They must be considering what next to do since you are absent," said Denski. "I don't like that. The pit-fall of all high intellect is that it is apt to imagine that an inferior quality of intellect is nonexistent."

"Spoken like a true Scotsman!" he cried. "You consider it your duty to go and have a look at your friends outside."

"This speech affected his face in much the same manner as his first cup of whisky had done."

"Spoken like a true Scotsman!" he cried. "You consider it your duty to go and have a look at your friends outside."

STEALTHY TERROR By JOHN FERGUSON

I could, of course, use my light, which would have shown, but I need not do that. This part of the house had been a modern addition to the original building...

Still, I knew that without a ladder it was equally impossible to scale, and the first thing I saw when I entered was the house's dangling in the air from the skylight...

Had my eyes not grown accustomed to the dark, I should have been blinded by the light. The peddler was a small man, a little man, a little man...

I wanted to have a look at the fellow, but of course dared not strike a match. They would be watching eagerly enough...

Let them find out that their scheme had miscarried by waiting. They would be puzzled at the absence of any sign of either failure or success...
