

Evening Public Ledger

Philadelphia, Thursday, May 23, 1918

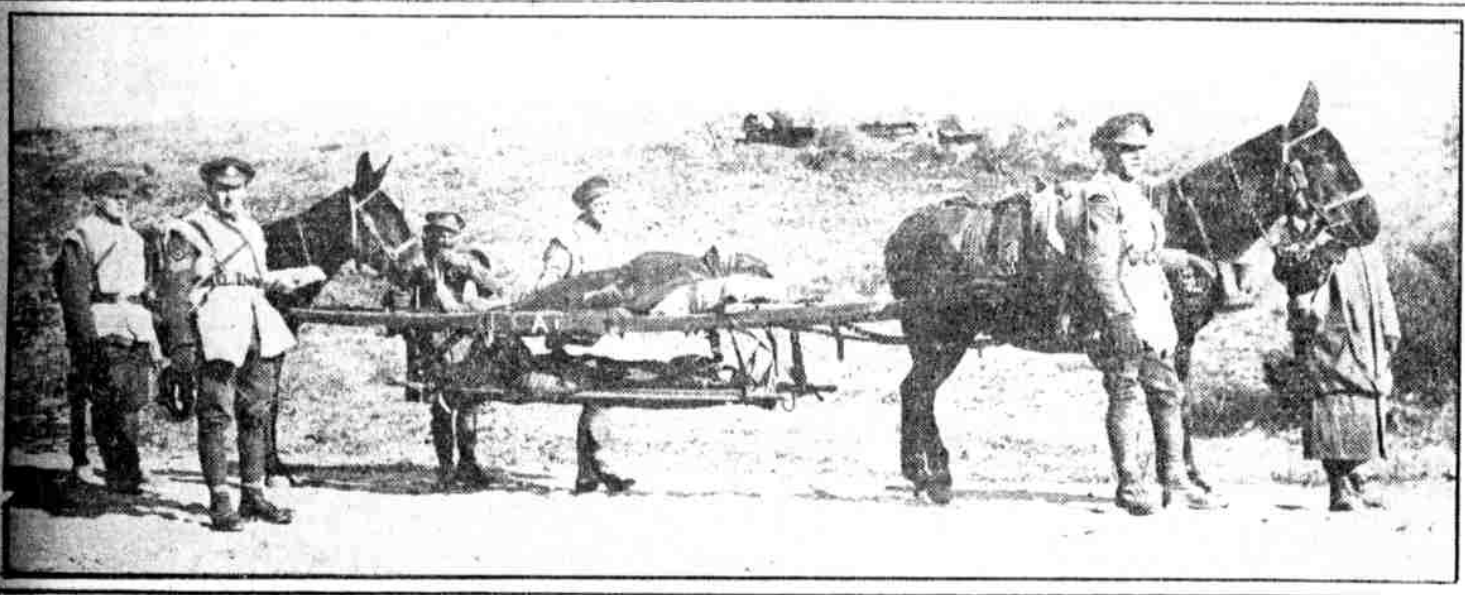

HERE AND THERE AND EVERYWHERE THE CAMERA TURNS IN GRAPHIC PORTRAYAL OF THE NEWS

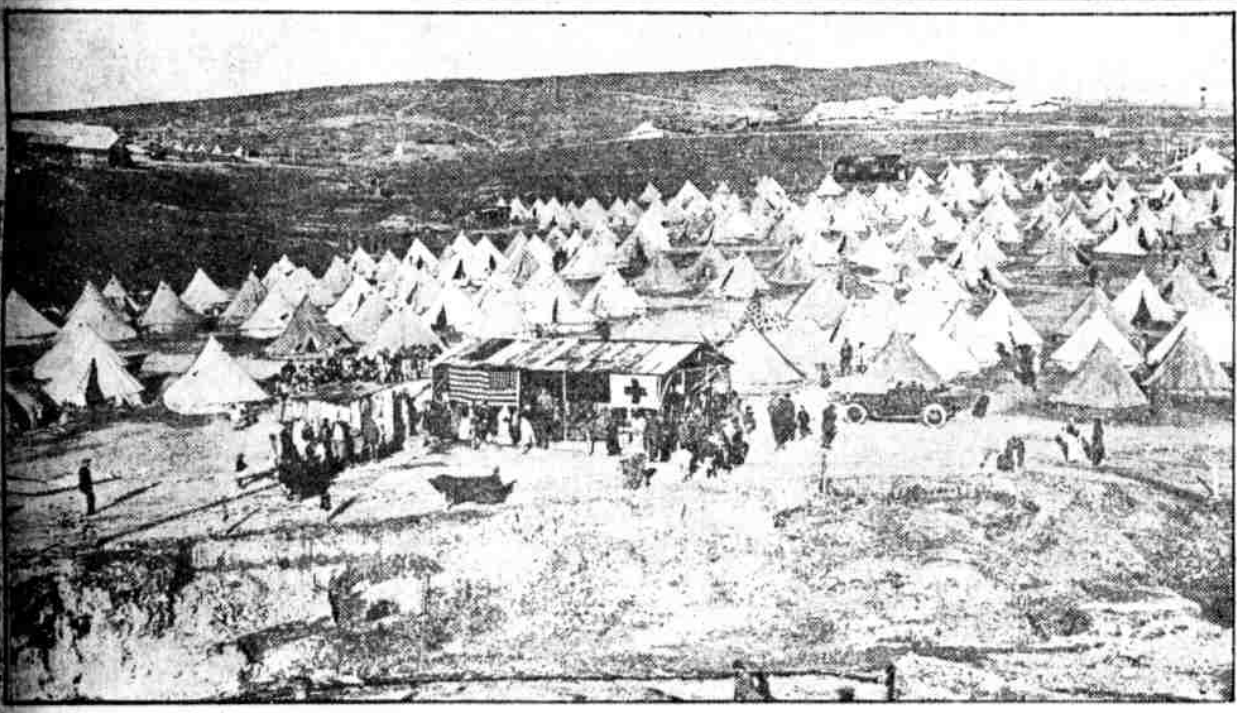

SOME DAY SOON THE TOMMY "WAACS," these brave British women doing such splendid work behind the battle front in France, will find their ranks augmented by American girls thoroughly trained in the art of camouflage. The photograph shows a contingent of these members of the Women's Camouflage Corps at work on the rifle range.

EVERY DAY, AFTER the war chest teams report at luncheon in the Bellevue-Stratford, there is a "wad" of money which must be taken to the bank for safekeeping. A Motor Messenger, carefully guarded, sees that it gets there.

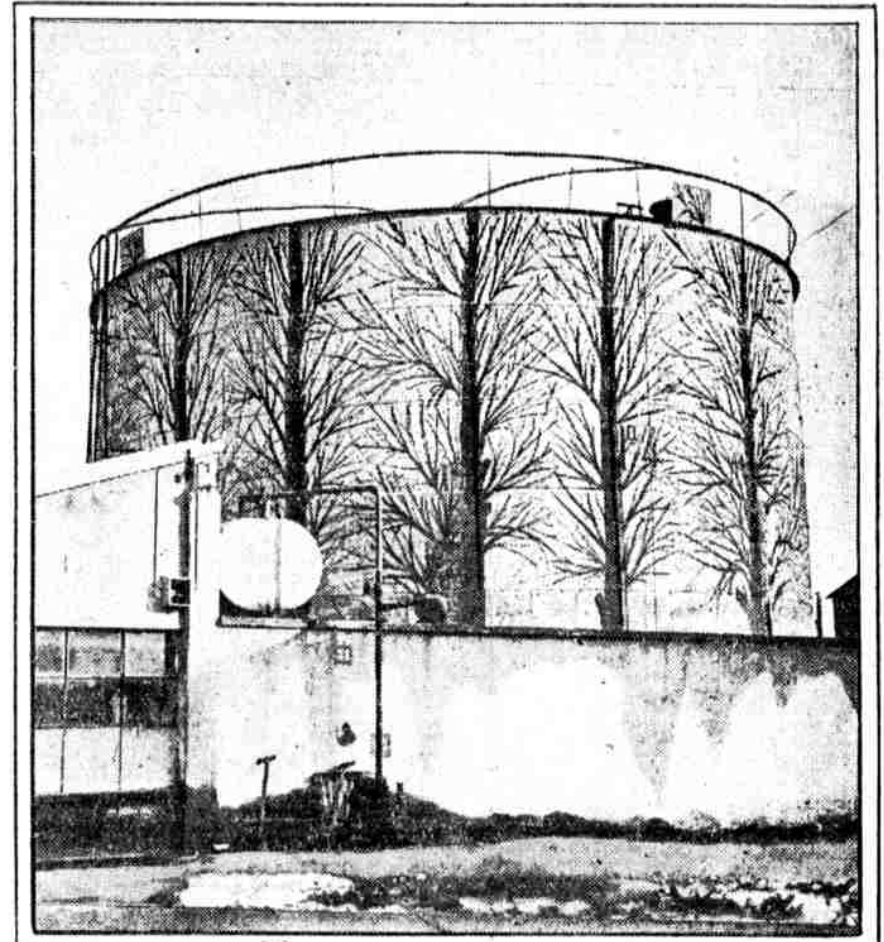

A DOUBLE LITTER slung between donkeys is something new when it comes to conveying the wounded, and the British forces on the Macedonian front have contrived it for service in the difficult mountain region north of Salonica.

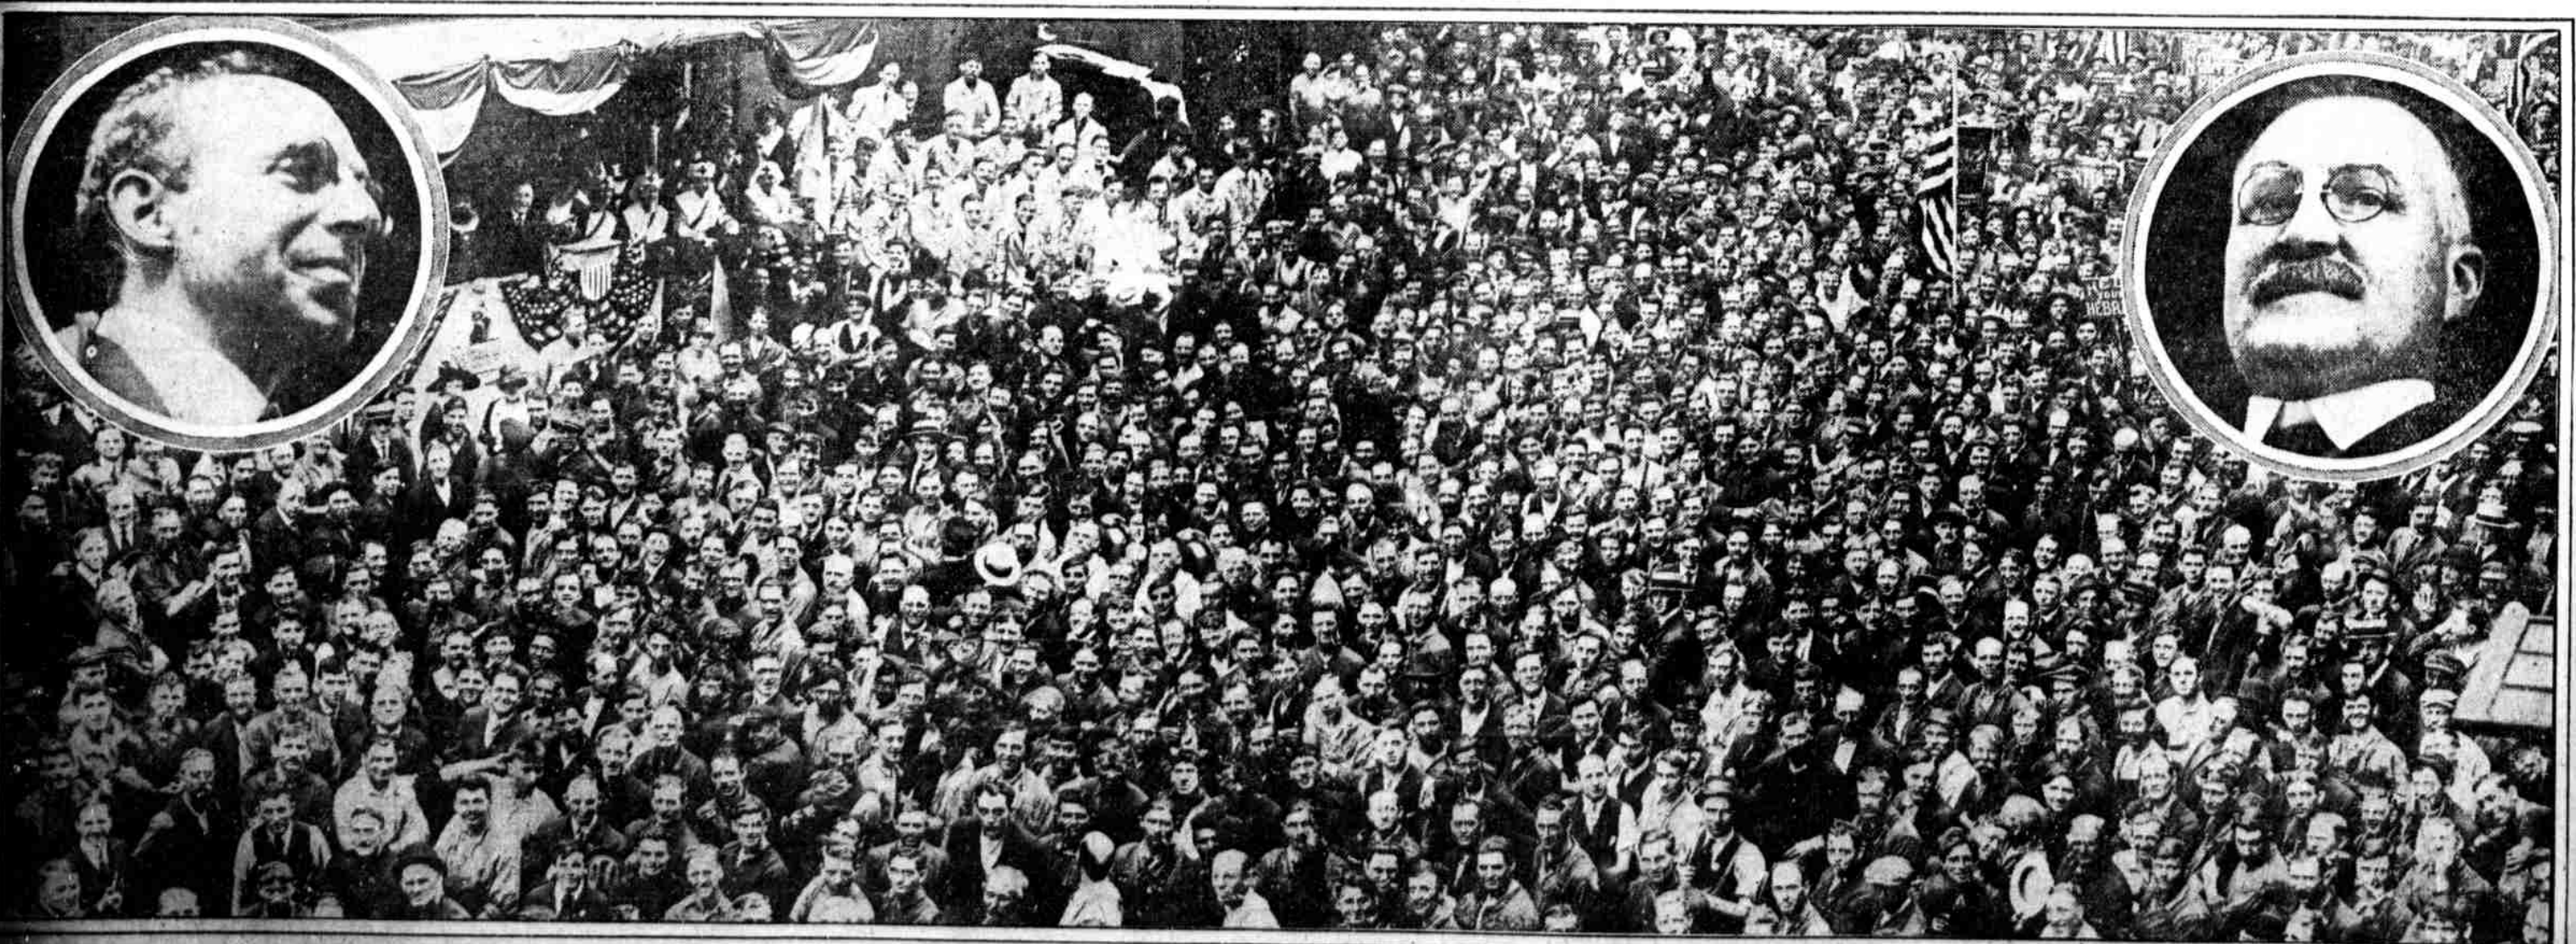

CONTRIBUTORS TO THE WAR CHEST can feel a personal pride in this encampment for destitute refugees maintained by the American Red Cross on the outskirts of Salonica.

PHILADELPHIA NURSES are being carefully trained in the art of bandaging, in anticipation of the day when they may be called upon to treat wounded American soldiers.

ALL SORTS OF CAMOUFLAGE photographs have come from the war zones, but this means of concealing a gas tank in a Balkan town from the spying eyes of enemy airmen is something out of the ordinary.

NOT CONTENT WITH BEING ENGAGED in patriotic work of providing the means of vital transportation to win the war, these thorough-going employees of the Baldwin Locomotive Works have rallied to the support of the War Chest, as they did in aid of the other patriotic campaigns. Speakers at their rally yesterday were E. A. Hartogs, a Belgian (in the circle to the left), and Frank Coggeshall (right), chairman of the Baldwin War Chest Committee.