

Evening Public Ledger

Philadelphia, Thursday, May 30, 1918

VIM AND VIGOR OF YOUTH FIND EXPRESSION IN VARIED ACTIVITIES DEPICTED BY THE CAMERA

NEATH A BOWER OF GREENS the Fairy Queen of the May and her youth-attendants will pass at the fete of the Oak Lane Country Day School tomorrow.

FAIRYLAND LIVES again in the talent of pupils of the Oak Lane Country Day School, shown above rehearsing one of the magic scenes of their play.

MISS SPRINGTIME (Miss Eleanor Scott) is richly gifted with attendants in the Oak Lane children's fete.

AND THEN WILL COME the May-pole dance, the supreme moment of the day. The inhabitants of Fairyland could not be clothed more picturesquely than these flesh-and-blood Oak Lane children.

WHEN NOT SERVING as Red Cross aides, these young women are mastering their new duties as munition workers at the Government's bag-loading plant at Washington Park, New Jersey. And, by the way, they have just finished a successful campaign conducted among their sister workers.

THE ENERGETIC LEADER of the Red Cross contingent to the left is Miss Mildred Park.

CAN YOU IMAGINE roses, pansies and cornflowers and a sleeping princess all slumbering in a fairy garden? If not, the art of these youthful Oak Lane actresses may help you.

PROUD OF THE GIFTS they were able to turn over to the Red Cross, these youthful patriots at the Red Cross plant are pictured by the photographer.

... performed by Philadelphia grown-ups, as these juvenile Red Cross enthusiasts of the Baldwin School, Sixteenth and ... their collected and turned over to the Naval Auxiliary of the Red Cross. In the center is Miss M...