

BIG PRICES ARE PAID FOR BLOODED CATTLE

Ninety-six Jerseys Sold for $60,555 at Linden Grove Farm, Coopersburg

Allentown, Pa., May 31.—There was an element of excitement to the great sale of Jersey cattle at Linden Grove farm at Coopersburg yesterday caused by the death in the morning of Mrs. Tilghman S. Cooper, wife of Mr. Cooper, importer and breeder, who has conducted these sales for more than thirty years.

Mrs. Cooper died a few hours before the time set for the opening of the sale and it was impossible to postpone the event. She was sixty-two years old, and for nearly forty years had been a leader in social and civic affairs.

The total number of animals sold was ninety-six, for an aggregate of $60,555, or a sale average of $630.74, a record price for young stock.

The great cow champion Vermont, valued at $1000, was brought out, but not sold. Mr. Cooper had determined she was worth $1000, but she was not sold for more than that and she was led back to the barn.

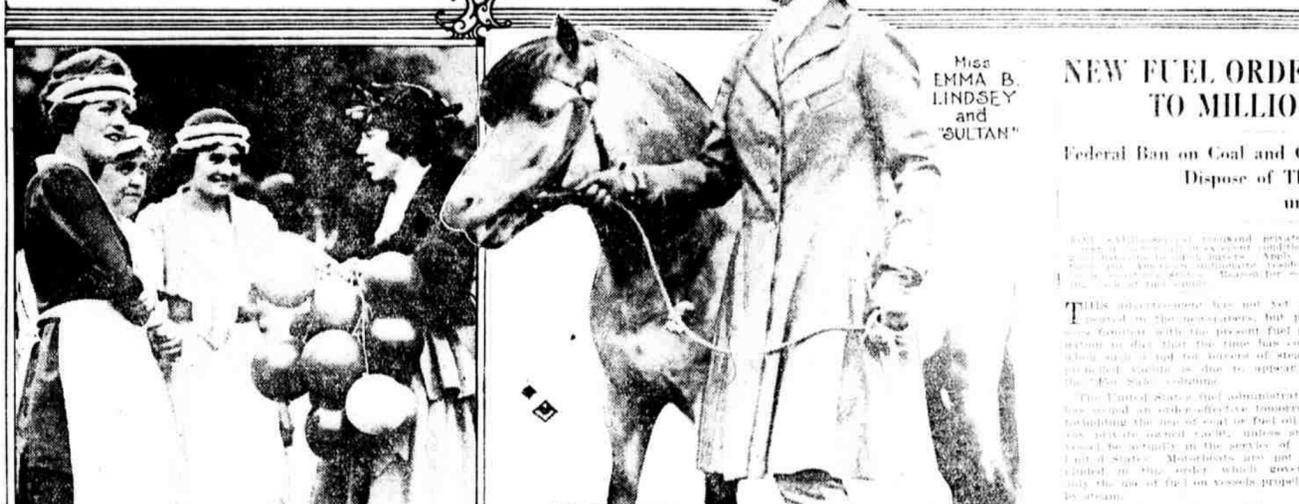

The highest buyer was T. De Witt Coker, of Philadelphia, owner of White Horse Farm at Pottsville, whose purchases cost him $11,250, and who paid the highest price for any single animal, $2700 for the cow Prudence Jersey Belle, bred by Thomas Vibert, of Hopedale, Island of Jersey, and imported last December by Mr. Cooper.

The second largest purchaser was Edward C. Lassiter, owner of the great Fairview ranch in Texas, larger than Bucks County, who bought a lot of fine stock to inject new blood into his large herd.

Other heavy purchasers were S. N. Kaplan, of New York city, a new fancier; M. J. George, of Burlington, Tex.; and A. R. Hamilton, of Pittsburgh.

A prominent visitor was B. M. Hawks, manager of the Rockwell Farm at Tarrtown, but he did not bid in a single animal.

L. W. W. PLANNED FOR SABOTAGE IN ARMY

Witness at Chicago Reveals Plot to Spoil Food and Clothing

Chicago, May 31.—Private Frank Wormke, alias Frank Woods, declared that he was asked by members of the I. W. W. to teach sabotage in the American army during his testimony yesterday in the trial of 112 members of the organization here.

Wormke said he was informed, could include placing a foreign substance in food to cause illness and the cutting up of clothing.

Wormke's tale of violence by members of the organization spanned a period of nearly two years, during a part of which he worked as an organizer in the harvest fields, the big lumber camps, the shipping districts and the orange belt of California.

He admitted committing acts of sabotage while an I. W. W. delegate, and said he recruited W. W. literature in at least one instance after he entered the Jefferson Barracks. He told of deserting from the Colorado National Guard, enlisting in the summer at Minot, N. D., under a fictitious name to obtain release from charges preferred by State authorities and testified that he, as a delegate, had been instructed to encourage violence.

In the big lumber camps of Washington and Oregon, Wormke and other members drove spikes into logs, well concealed under the bark, to wreck mill machinery, he testified. He said at least one member, whom he named as James Edwards, carried a bottle of liquid into the Montana lumber districts that would cause fire when thrown upon wood.

He testified that during the outbreaks in Kansas and Oklahoma harvest fields last year the outbreaks were intimidated and in one case the Sheriff himself was placed in jail. Freight trains were frequently commandeered there, as well as in California; that there were numerous fires in and about Aberdeen, S. D., and that when the barn of the police chief burned at the I. W. W.'s modest town.

He testified that while secretary of the branch at San Francisco, Cal., he attempted to organize longshoremen with a view to shut down export of munitions. Wormke said members were advised to resist the draft and commit sabotage against big war industries.

Wormke has been in custody of Federal authorities for several months pending determination of his status in the army.

MOTHERS' PROBLEMS

For the Children's Year

By MARY L. REARD, R. S., Director of the school of Mothercraft War Service

Copyright, 1918, by Public Ledger Company. SUMMER FOODS FOR CHILDREN

Simple food at regular meals is necessary for insurance of health and comfort and for amiable disposition, especially during the summer months.

AFTER two years of age children (or those who survive) have a less delicate and sensitive digestion. Even until eight or nine years, however, digestion is easily upset, especially during the warm weather. Care must therefore be continued, in the selection of food, in its preparation, in cleanliness of food and utensils, and in the regularity of meals.

Every case of indigestion in children is nature's discredit mark against some one who has had something to do with the food or feeding of those children.

During the summer it is of special importance to keep the diet simple, omitting all pastries, fried foods, rich dishes, pickles, pork in any form, canned meats. The children will be better off without any meat at all, this should be limited to a little fresh fish or chicken two or three times a week.

Instead of meat they should have milk, one or two eggs, and either cheese (Swiss or American) or nut meats that have been ground in the meat grinder, or some peas or beans that have been prepared in a manner suitable for their age.

Special care should be taken not to serve acid fruits (such as apple sauce, baked apple, orange or grapefruit at the same meal) with milk in its usual beverage. Have strawberries, cherries or peaches are likely to upset digestion at this age; they should never be served with milk to children. It is best to stew them slowly, with a very little sweetening.

A few four- or five-year-old children may profitably have raw lettuce if it is shredded, raw grated carrot or well-ripened tomato. Minors, cherries, stewed, corn should be cut from the ear, and even then given cautiously. The skin should be removed from the

NO WAR-CHEST SLACKERS AT EASTERN PENITENTIARY

Convict Serving Life Sentence Donates His All, $155—Another Prisoner Contributes $150—Every One Gives Something

SERVING a life sentence in Eastern Penitentiary No. 1 today donated all his worldly goods, amounting to $155, to the War Chest.

Another prisoner, who has earned $150 by making and selling knitting needles, gave the entire amount to the cause. A negro girl called one of the workers to her and gave to cents.

"It's all I have," she said, "but I want to give that to my country."

It was just such contributions as those that made the penitentiary donation to the War Chest go over the top by 50 per cent. Warden McKenty said he would have $1000 in cash to hand over to the committee tomorrow as a result of the campaign in the prison which closed this afternoon.

Every man and woman prisoner, and there are now 1104 men and twenty-eight women, gave something.

As a fitting close to the campaign at the prison and to thank the promoters for their contributions, the All Nations and All Goods Company and four-minute speakers held patriotic services in the penitentiary courtyard this afternoon.

Lieutenant C. J. Clark, Camp 107, introduced a squad of soldiers from that camp representing every nation. Then a symbolic group of men and women was presented, showing the various organizations which are to be aided by the War Chest fund.

"Imagine what a splendid fund we would have if every man and woman would give us your people have," said Lieutenant Clark. "I am glad that you are ready to do your share. There is nothing in the world worse than a fireman, and I want to tell you we will have a job for all of you as soon as you can offer yourself, killing Germans."

The general campaign has been conducted under the direction of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, of which the penitentiary is a member.

We are proud of our own and would like to see you in the front ranks of the war effort. Write to Warden McKenty, Eastern Penitentiary No. 1, Philadelphia, Pa.

MILADY'S GOWNS ADVANCE

Husbands Will Have to Pay More for Wives' Costumes

Washington, May 31.—That the cost of women's coats and suits next year will cause many a long-drawn gasp is the prediction of Franklin Simon, president of the National Garment Retailers' Association. In an article on speculation in woollens in the forthcoming issue of the association's official organ he says the cost which sold for $29.50 last year will be retailed this year at $49.50, with the same quality of goods and workmanship, while the suit bought last year for $29.50 will bring $45 retail at the beginning of the next season.

Mr. Simon, considering a serious situation facing the retail garment field and recommending the immediate adoption of a system of rationing woollens used by manufacturers, basing the rationing upon the amount of material used by the same firms in previous seasons.

An editorial in the same publication places the blame for price inflation entirely upon the large manufacturers of woollens, a proposal, and asserts that one manufacturer last year sold $1,200,000 worth of woollens that had been purchased early and held for the advance.

The Merchant Ladies' Government Association, composed of cloak and suit jobs of this city doing an annual business of $300,000,000, adopted a resolution in a special meeting last night urging the conference of garment wholesalers and retailers to seek Government aid to prevent gouging and profiteering in raw material goods in their trade.

The Federal State and Administration has issued an order which will prohibit the use of coal and oil on pleasure boats, unless they are used for business purposes.

The order is expected to drive many of the wealthy yachtsmen to dispose of their boats, as they will be unable to use them for pleasure.

COUNCILS WILL AID TO CONTRA

"Excess Payment" Legality to Relieve Hardship of Freight Rate Increase

Increased freight rates as the feet city contractors will be called by "excess payments," if plans set up by the Department of Public are approved by Congress. Bill providing fair play for men doing work will likely be introduced next week.

Contractors who have submitted or been awarded contracts for work, and the purchase of necessary supplies to prosecute the work, may themselves face to face with a freight rate increase that will eat into their profits.

Another class of losses that will have to be borne by reason of the emergency lies in the payment to contractors of losses sustained through cancellation of their contracts or through necessary delays in the prosecution of public work.

The two subway construction companies for work on Arch Street, come under this legislation. It is estimated that $500,000 payment will have to be made to the company before the work is actually stopped. Until it is stopped, the city will not have made good its promise to abandon all transit work that cannot be completed early. An adjustment of this claim is under way. Councils have not yet authorized the Mayor to enter into a settlement.
