

ECLIPSE OF SUN VISIBLE HERE SATURDAY EVENING

The Rev. Walter Matos, Swarthmore, Warns Against Possible Harm to Eyes in Viewing Phenomenon

PHILADELPHIANS will see an eclipse of the sun for about two hours Saturday evening. The sun will be partly obscured here between about 6:30 o'clock and 8:30 o'clock. At points reaching from Seattle, Wash., to western Florida, the sun will be totally obscured by the moon. In Philadelphia the eclipse will be about two-thirds of the sun's surface, according to the Rev. Walter Matos, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Swarthmore, who is an astronomer. When the eclipse is at its height here the sun will resemble a crescent, maintaining that shape approximately two hours when it sets with sunset. This eclipse, the first total one since May 28, 1906, will begin at sunrise and will first be noticed in the western part of the country, whether many of the leading astronomers already have gone to establish observation posts from which photographs of the eclipse may be made. The path of the eclipse in its totality has been determined, and along that route the astronomers will observe the darkened sun. While the moon is causing the eclipse, the lunar body will not be visible. As the eclipse gradually approaches the stations in its path the chickens will begin to roost, Mr. Matos said, and marked decreases in temperature will be noted. Stars will be visible while the sun is totally eclipsed, he added. Warning persons who may want to view the eclipse as it appears here, Mr. Matos advises against the use of telescopes to look directly at the sun, because to do so would permanently impair the eyesight. He urges use of two pieces of cardboard, one with a pinhole in it through which the sun may shine on the second piece, thus reflecting the eclipse on the lower card. Another thing to be avoided, Mr. Matos declared, is the use of smoked glass, unless very carefully handled. The smoked side may be rubbed slightly and remove some of the murkiness, which would allow the sun too directly into the eyes. One way in which a telescope may be used with safety, he averred, is by cutting a hole the size of the telescope end in a piece of card. Fit the card over the telescope and hold another card under the end of the glass, allowing the sun to shine through the glass to the lower card. Persons near trees may be able to observe the visible shape of the sun during the eclipse by watching the shadows cast under trees. Each ray of the sun that penetrates between the leaves will be in the shape of a crescent, Mr. Matos said.

ADVENTURES WITH A PURSE

SMART ENAMEL LINKS FOR SUMMER SHIRTS

Old Rose With Thin Band of Gold—A Fetching Knitting Bag and Negliges

"I HAVE a dandy cap for motoring," sighs the man of the house. "Now all I need is the automobile to go with it!" Maybe he's just laid in a new supply of cool summer shirts, too, with soft cuffs. If he has, he will probably want cuff-links to go with them. For he knows that regular cuff-buttons cannot be worn with soft shirts. They will not stay in the buttonholes. The shops are displaying such very attractive cuff-links right now that they tempt one to buy a pair as a surprise for "him." One pair I saw is of imitation old rose enamel with a band of gold around the edge. I immediately associated this with the lovely enamel toilet sets which are so expensive, and was therefore pleasantly surprised to find that the set is twenty-five cents. And another very plain but distinctive pair consists of neat pearl buttons. The price of this set also is twenty-five cents. These buttons are on sale and the supply is limited.

Ask a woman what she had most rather do when she comes home after a warm afternoon of shopping and she will say, "Slip into something loose and cool and rest a few minutes." I saw something "loose and cool" today which is satisfying both from a standpoint of attractiveness and low price. This rippling, little negligee is of dainty white dotted Swiss. Pale pink satin, fluted, trims the short sleeves and gives a soft finish to the neck, and a wide ribbon of pale pink silk around the waist. The price is only $2.95.

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?" "I'm going a-knitting, kind sir," she said. And, of course, if she is going a-knitting, she must have a fetching bag. To be sure, most every woman is the proud possessor of one of smaller or larger dimension but they will become shabby. If yours has reached that stage, you will be glad to hear of the spacious bag I saw today. It is large, of black silk, and is lined with a colorful purple. Stuffed "appies," which have been used so effectively this year for decorating the bags, form the trimming. One is of purple to match the lining.
