HAVE RED, WHITE AND BLUE FLOWER BOXES THIS SUMMER

Hanging Baskets, Too, Can Be Patriotic—A Little Enamel Geraniums, Lobelia, Candytuft and Larkspur Are Some of the Things Clementine Used to Fix Hers

IT CAME to Clementine at 6 o'clock one night as we rode home on a packed trolley car. Previously we had rebuked her for tying red, white and blue ribbon on the furries of our two kittens Margaret and Arthur. It was profane, we told her. But this was different.

Tied white and blue flower boxes, she said suddenly. Then before I had a chance to say anything, "Red, white and blue hanging baskets," she almost exploded.

And that was the beginning.

Other people all over the country have copied her idea since. Clementine will tell you, but this most beautiful patriotic plant really originated in her own prolific brain—even as she clung to a trolley strap.

DO YOU want to hear about our little red, white and blue porch gardens? It was two days later Clementine got all her paraphernalia together. A few phone calls and one visit to a greenhouse found her so versed in flower knowledge that she knew there was a white flower and which a blue and which a red one. Armed with this knowledge, she started to work on the foundations. You see it was this way. If you painted an enameled hanging basket white you need red and blue flowers. If you did it in red, you would call for red and white blossoms. Our hanging baskets are of wicker and take kindly to any paint or enamel. Finally we decided on white with tiny top border of blue for the three baskets for the front porch and blue for the one to be hung on the little upstairs veranda. Then it was time for the flowers. ADVENTURES WITH A PURSE

COLD SHOWERS CALL FOR TURKISH TOWELS

Some Extra Large Pink and White Plaid Ones Are Sixty Cents—Trouser Press

HOT summer days mean many baths. For an invigorating cold plunge or a soothing tepid bath is one of the few consolations left to us city folks who cannot run away for the whole summer. And many baths mean an extra supply of towels. I saw some lovely heavy pink and white plaid, for sixty cents. Their value is exceptional.

In the matter of your husband's clothes, you probably do one of two things—either you have the tailor come to take away his trousers, the "man of the house" paying perfectly good money to have them pressed, or else, if the family purse is too flat, perhaps you press them yourself. In either event, then the trouser press which I saw today should interest you. It is of cardboard, folded over and shaped very much like trousers. The trousers are dampened slightly and are fitted into the folds of the press. And when they are taken out, behold as sharp a crease as was ever ironed by the most skillful tailor. The price of this ingenious device is $1.

"Joe's" Letter Answered

To the Editor of Woman's Page:
Dear Madam—I have read "Joe's" letter. It sounds like a story, but it is absurd. True love is not a mere affection and does rise to the loftiness of an immediate marriage. It is not an act which can be trifled with, and we must remember that there are many who believe that marriage is a failure by those who have made mistakes in choice. Your answer to the woman who asked for advice she should tell the young man exactly what he wants and needs, and not mind twitting in his opinion. It is honorable as far as you make it think that it would be honorable to say nothing?

It is a mystery to me. "Joe" says he would be a better man when he would cause unhappiness in the future.

Please be kind to me and another whom you must trim hats very well. If you do not see any advertisements, why don't you put one in yourself? It doesn't cost anything.

Address your paper a little note to get an answer. I hope you will find a nice place and make enough to have a fine vacation with the Campfire Girls.

F. C.

P.S.—Perhaps "Joe" feels that it might be dishonorable after asking for a woman's love and having received her promise of love and marriage to give back that promise. Some men might feel that way. I hope he will speak with his mother and father about this.

A great many of these things depend on the personal point of view. But it seems better to be aboveboard and frank than to be secretively in the most vital things of life.

Young Authorless Wants Advice

To the Editor of Woman's Page:
Dear Madam—I am a girl of fifteen years and have written a short story that I wish to send to a paper. Will you kindly answer me? It is not too much trouble.

Do you have to pay for a short story?

Do I have to state my age?

Address your paper a little note to go with the story.

A WOULD-BE AUTHORLESS.

Editors are very busy these days, like anything else, and they take time in reading a story. A story should preferably be typewritten, but if it is impossible for you to have it typed out, it is best to write it very clearly and with the lines rather far apart. It is hard to tell how soon a story will appear after it has been sent in, and you the mother's address by mail. Keep your courage up and keep on hoping and know things will get straightened out sooner or later.

Address of "Discouraged" is held here.

Another Cat Lover

To the Editor of Woman's Page:

Dear Madam—I happened to see Mrs. F. J. S.'s cat in the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER of May 25. Now, I am a cat lover and I should only be too happy to have you print the story again, because it is good that they may keep it for months before it appears.

Edith, you will get paid for a short story, and I am sure you could sell it to a paper, a little note to go with the story.

It is a story, when you send the story and it would be better not to send any note with it. Just write the name of each page and underneath write, "Submitted at your regular rates." I will you will have your story accepted.
