ECLIPSE OF SUN BEGINS 6:32 P. M.

Phenomenon May Be Seen in Partial State From This Section ENDS AT 8:18 O'CLOCK

Sol Hides His Light to the World Tonight

The eclipse of the sun will be visible at 6:32 o'clock tonight and will continue until 8:18.

A partial eclipse of the sun will begin here at 6:32 o'clock this evening and will continue until 8:18 o'clock.

Philadelphia is too far out of the path of the moon for its view of the sun to be totally obscured, but the eclipse will be seen here in a three-fourths state.

Because of the eclipse, stars will be seen two hours ahead of the time they usually appear.

As the eclipse becomes more pronounced the size of the sun as seen from here will diminish and its shape will assume that of a crescent, until, at the height of the eclipse, at 7:27 o'clock, it will appear to Philadelphia to resemble the new moon, an inverted crescent.

This is the first total eclipse in this country since 1706. Astronomers from all over the eastern part of the United States have come to stations in the West which are in the path of totality to make pictures of the corona of the eclipse.

The eclipse path of totality extends from Washington to Florida and is about ninety miles in width.

Astronomers have gone West to see the eclipse will observe:

First. The corona, which consists of a great display of luminous streamers around the hidden sun, from which most of the light we see is derived.

Second. The changes that take place in the magnetism of the earth and the electric state of the air during the time of the total obscuration lasts.

Third. The search for new planets nearer the sun than Mercury, the nearest one now known.

Fourth. Abnormal or unexpected phenomena that may show either in the form, extension or color of the corona or in the condition of the atmosphere of the earth.

State Senator William Spruell, who founded the Spruell observatory at Swarthmore College, sent a party of local astronomers to Brandon, Col., to observe the eclipse.

John A. Miller, professor of astronomy at Swarthmore, Miss Grace Jordan, of Smith College, Miss Ella Williams and Miss Hazel Brown, of Swarthmore College, and Professor Hall and W. F. Howard, of Indiana College.

Because of the daylight-saving measure passed by Congress the eclipse is an hour late along its route.

The plan to get more sunlight into American activities was struck upon scientists at determined and announced the exact time at which the eclipse would occur.

However, their observations still hold good, as one hour is added to each point's designated time for seeing the eclipse.

Seattle, Wash., is the farthest place in the West that will see the sun totally obscured, while the stage of complete totality will be seen on this side of the country on the eastern side of Florida.

BUSINESS CAREER OF PETER FLINT

A Story of Salesmanship by Harold Whitehead

Mr. Whitehead will answer your business questions on business, selling, advertising and employment. Ask your questions clearly and concisely. Your correspondence should be brief and to the point. All questions will be answered in this column. The most interesting questions will be answered in the next issue.

WHAT'S wrong with me? Why do I seem to get into all kinds of trouble and disappointment and worry?

Why can't things go smoothly with me as they seem to do with other young fellows? Ever since I started my business career I seem to have been blundering around and without any apparent reason running into all kinds of snags.

I was telling all this to Graham after I had returned from seeing Rosie at Newark.

"I had heard you were walking up and down in my room and came to see me and find out what was the matter. After listening to my tirade against fate he said, 'I don't really like to help you, but I don't know whether I can or not. What you're going through is virtually the same as every other young fellow has been up against. Some are worse in extent and some are allowed to fight their own way, but have the encouragement of parents and a good home, the influence of which act as an anchor to them. You are more unfortunate than many young fellows inasmuch as, from what you tell me, you don't get the right kind of advice and encouragement from your dad.'

"My dad's all right," I flared up; "he just doesn't understand."

"Good boy," continued Graham. "Now, I'll tell you one or two things that are wrong with you. In the first place, you think too much of yourself and about yourself. You are all the time wondering why people say this to you or why people say that. You don't give people enough credit for sincerity. Let Sidons make the most innocent remark to you and you wonder what's at the back of it."

"Then, you have the wrong view on business. You have not yet got to the point where you are willing to work wholeheartedly for other people—and you're not."

"Huh!" I interrupted, "now you're talking through your hat. I haven't any money to get into business for myself."

"You must never neglect the fact that you are a young man with a lot of energy and a lot of ability. You are a young man with a lot of energy and a lot of ability. You are a young man with a lot of energy and a lot of ability."
