PATROL VESSEL BATTLES U-BOAT

Both the cases cited occurred since then, but have been kept secret up to today. Many naval district reports have come in since the raiders first appeared, but the navy has persistently denied that it had information concerning the submarine situation other than what it announced.

When the department had news of the Vinland sinking all day, denied it, and only announced the sinking at night, after the crew had landed.

The Navy Department, it was learned, has told them to fire at anything that they think even remotely resembles a submarine. The orders go on the theory that it is better to waste a shell on a floating raft, a porpoise or a whale than to lose a submarine through economy of conservation.

Incidentally, department authorities warn that there is much false information being sent to the press regarding the work of those who go down to sea, are spinning yarns of all kinds, while German propagandists are adding thereto with stories of fancied disasters.

CHASERS SCOUR SEAS IN SUBMARINE HUNT

WILSON TALK DEEPLY IMPRESSES MEXICANS

Since Interview Editors Have Discussed President Most of Time

CLAIM HIM AS OUR MAN

Declare German Propaganda Not as Extensive as Made Out to Be

New York, June 12.—The group of twenty-one Mexican journalists who are touring the country under the auspices of the committee on the information arrived here at 9 o'clock last night from Bethlehem, Pa.

Our talk with the President was asked. "The psychology of people in the face of growing plants," he answered, "it must be cultivated in order to grow..."

Asked as to the report that U-boats were being supplied from Mexican waters, the editor said emphatically that this was not true.
