ATLANTIC GASOLINE Puts Pepin Your Motor

ON the highways "over there" and over here, through muck and mire, up hill and down, gasoline-driven truck-trains transport men and munitions.

Through mud up to the hubs, sometimes, they plough their way with vigor and determination—the kind that is going to win this war for the Allies.

When these overland army trains cross the Pennsylvania border, they are met by representatives of the Atlantic Refining Company and convoyed through the Keystone State.

At various points along the route, the truck-train is halted long enough to take on a new supply of Atlantic Gasoline and Atlantic Motor Oils.
