

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Tells of Fete Champetre for Little House of St. Pantoleon—She Warns Against Gossip in Wartimes

THE Little House of Saint Pantoleon, the remarkable war relief organization founded by two women physicians, Dr. Elise Whitlock Rose and Dr. Elizabeth F. G. Clark, will benefit by the fete champetre which was held today at the country home of Mr. Warren Carter, in Springfield, Delaware County. The fete is given under the auspices of the Women's Club of Springfield, but the interests go far outside that little township.

The little house of Saint Pantoleon has grown up since the war, and is doing a tremendous amount of good in France by caring for the smaller hospitals and orphanages in the smaller towns and villages and the refugees from the occupied territories who are sent to these out-of-the-way places which other relief organizations may fall to reach.

All the proceeds of this outdoor fete will be donated to this purpose. The affair is unique, in that it had many of the characteristics of the fairs given in the springtime in Paris and other French cities. There are outdoor plays, all sorts of amusements for the children, a typical French bazaar and a flower and vegetable market. Mrs. William A. Allison, who, as president of the Women's Club of Springfield, is directing the arrangements, promises that as virtually everything for the bazaar has been donated the various articles are sold at pre-war prices. This is most unusual in these times, and those who are enjoying the fete do so with profit and still aid in this deserving charity.

The program for the outdoor fete is very fine also, for a number of good shows have been provided. Mr. Frederic Poole is taking part, as are also a coterie of young women from the Philadelphia School of Design for Women, who are giving a number of dances and show tableaux of the inspiring patriotic posters for the Liberty Loan.

There is a Dance du Printemps by a well-trained group of young children of Delaware County. Other specialties are given and the students of the Academy of the Fine Arts are flower girls in the marche des fleurs.

The kiddies are being regaled with moving pictures, and there are also amusements of all sorts and pony rides for them, as well as sports and gymnastics races for the grown-ups.

The thrift-stamp whirl is another decided novelty which the visitors are enjoying. Cards and games are under the direction of Mrs. George E. Speier, who is chairman of the fete, and a number of saloons are acting as aids.

Catharine Wharton Morris is to dance a mysterious Oriental dance (Fantasie d'Inde), which is one of the delightful novelties which the young women members of the Women's School of Design have undertaken for the affair.

And Mr. Frederic Poole, the noted Chinese missionary scholar and impersonator's reading of "The Yellow Jacket" is remarkable without doubt.

SOMETIMES wonder, when I see a lot of women gossiping together over their Red Cross or other activities, if they ever stop to consider what they are saying and if they could possibly imagine how far their idle gossip goes.

Only recently some women out on the Main Line got talking, and "Well, my dear, you know that good-looking Frenchman—? They've discovered he's a German spy, caught him with the goods. He's to be shot." "Oh, my dear, no!" and so it went. And the man was blackened forever in the minds of all present. One woman, however, thought to herself, "I'm going to follow that up and see how true it is." She told some one who was able to follow it up, and it proved to be not an exaggeration, not just hearsay, but a downright lie.

It's a pure case of German propaganda. Trying to discredit our allies among us over here. DOWN-RIGHT LIES. And idle women hear them, pick them up and pass them along. The man with whom this woman talked went into the matter thoroughly, and let me tell you, that both the Army and Navy Intelligence Departments are on the track of the gossiping women, and the first thing they know they'll be getting into real trouble for repeating unfounded tales about Government and service.

Ask some of these women when they tell you these tales if they can prove their stories, and nail the lie on the head in this way at the start. You'll be helping your country if you do.

MARY THAYER, Gertrude Thayer, Elizabeth Thayer, Ruth Packard, Lydia Clothier, Jesse Da Costa, Emily Clothier, Cintra Ellis, Katherine Rogers and Dorothy Rogers are interested in a "fair," which they are going to give at The Meadows, the home of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Packard, in Villanova. It is to be given on Saturday afternoon, June 22, for the benefit of the choir outing fund of the Church of the Good Shepherd at Rosemont.

These children are very much interested in this work, and do a lot to help along. They gave a French play and sale for its benefit last fall. I do hope they will be fair weather and it will be a success, as they are all working so hard.

A New Light

A clever inventor has devised a light which can be attached to the handle of a safety razor and enable soldiers to shave in the dark. The light brightens the face so that the shaving mirror may be taken painlessly. The device also can be attached to a toothbrush.

WOMEN HELPING HOOVER IN ALL PARTS OF STATE

Miss Virginia McComb, Back From Tour, Tells of Earnest, Systematized Work

"One has only to travel about to learn how alive the women are to the aims of the Government in its food administration work," said Miss Virginia M. McComb, executive secretary of department 3, of the women's committee here, just returned from a week's tour of Lackawanna, Luzerne, Elk and Potter counties.

In Lackawanna County the women are thoroughly organized and have so systematized their work in food conservation that it is possible within twenty-four hours to get into any home in the county with a food of propaganda or new ruling for food conservation. In other counties she found the women as wide awake, though in some sections organization has not been so nearly completed.

Mrs. Frank Kiser, Mrs. T. C. von Storch and Mrs. George Mitchell, of Scranton, are strong forces in the food conservation and production work in Lackawanna County. At a luncheon given at the home of Mrs. Dimmick in Scranton, Mrs. McComb presided over a committee meeting which included forty representatives of the various civic and patriotic activities of that section and declares it was an eye-opener as to the intensive and intelligent work which these women are doing toward excellent program for the war.

In Elk County, Mrs. J. E. Rutherford, chairman; Mrs. E. M. Bamford, deputy food administrator of the county, and Mrs. Frank Claussen, also Mrs. Albert Phelps, director for Ridgeway, the county seated round with Miss McComb and held serious food conservation rallies in six towns, with the result that these towns are now also organized.

In the offices in the Finance Building, in this city, where the central committees are at work, they are showing the same earnest spirit as the women of Lackawanna and Luzerne counties. A group of college women hold themselves in readiness for any war demands which may be required. Mrs. Charles M. Lee is the chairman for the city of Philadelphia and Miss I. G. Miller conducts the food-demonstration work among foreigners. Mrs. J. O. Clarke, of Germantown, a volunteer worker, who gives her time as unparagoned as a salaried official, has special charge of the home recipes and correspondence showing the help in the various food conservation stunts. She is also assistant to the executive secretary and is regarded as one of the most efficient members of the force.

Miss Helen Brownson, also of Germantown, Miss Mary Kilbourne, of Overbrook, West Philadelphia; Miss Lucy Lewis, and Miss Jessie Null are among the group of Philadelphia young women who are giving their time and effort toward emphasizing the efficiency of the food department of war work.

CHORAL CLUB TO ENTERTAIN

Business Women's Christian League Will Give Interesting Program at Navy Yard

The Choral Club of the Business Women's Christian League will entertain the sailors and marines in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium at the navy yard this evening.

The program, prepared by Miss May Porter, musical director of the club, promises to be brim full of bright, catchy songs and clever sketches, displaying a great variety of talent among the sixty-five business girls comprising the membership of the club. There will be ample opportunity afforded the jockies to join in the singing, and a shower of chocolate buds and chocolate cigarettes will be scattered among the audience as souvenirs of the occasion.

Miss Lily Haensflus and Miss Elizabeth Ernst will be heard in "non-sense songs," Miss Lillian Yarnall, Mrs. M. B. Myers, and Carline in character sketches. Miss Elizabeth Tuft in a demonstration of palm reading. Miss Eugenia Gera in violin solos. Miss Inez Deere in readings, and incidental solos in the choral numbers will be sung by Miss Katharine Berlinger, Miss Violet Haensflus, Miss Elizabeth Hickman and Miss Nellie Kleppinger. A special feature will be the Japanese "Cherry Blossom Dance" in costume.

The accompanists will be Miss Blanche Silvis Copes, pianist, and Miss Elizabeth Porter, violinist. Miss Melberia M. Maize, president of the choral club, and Mr. W. H. Parry, social Y. M. C. A. worker at the navy yard, are assisting in every way to make the affair a success.

YORK ROAD COMMENCEMENTS

Exercises at Soudertown and Abington Attract Large Audiences

Dr. Charles C. Ellis, vice president of Juniata College, delivered the address at the commencement of the Class of 1918, Soudertown High School, last night, when diplomas were presented to eleven graduates. Members of the class were Evan Alderfer, Harold Alderfer, William Allen, Raymond Dain, Miss Ellen Dewey, Frederic Harris, Miss Anna Herber, Raymond Moyer, Elwood Tyson, A. Randal Zandt and Grant Gehman. The class was unusual among classes graduated from northern suburban high schools this year—only membership of eleven, there were but two young women.

Class day events at the Abington High School last night attracted an audience of more than five hundred people from the York Road section. Eldredge Groshens read the class history, and the prophecies were given by Miss Harriet Smith and George Busard. The class poem was recited by William R. Matson, and the work of the class art show was by Miss Grace Norcross and Melville L. Williams. Class presentations were made by Miss Mabel E. Kline and Edward J. Pincke. Frank E. Chesterman, Jr., of Noble, made the presentation to the school. The mantle oratorical was delivered by Henderson Smith, and the junior response was by Henderson Smith. The song of the class of 1918 was written by Miss Eloise Roberts, and the work is to be arranged so that it will interlock instead of overlap. Efficiency, without the slightest waste of time or of energy, is all-important for the administration of the vast work that must be done by American women.

MISS PAULETTE VAN ROECKEN'S

BIG ARMY OF WOMEN RECRUITS IS SOUGHT

Emergency Aid Will Begin Campaign on Monday for 50,000 War Workers

Recruiting between 8000 and 12,000 women for work in war factories and arsenals will be undertaken by the Emergency Aid, since it has been recognized by the Government and appointed by Benedict Holden, of Schulzkill Arsenal, to handle the welfare problems surrounding the entrance of women into the arsenals here. Eight thousand to 12,000 or 15,000 is the minimum quota named for immediate enrollment by the Government. An estimate of 50,000 is not an extravagant estimate of the number of women in Philadelphia who before long will be in war industries, according to a statement made at the Emergency Aid headquarters.

Recruiting stations at five places in the city open Monday, when the drive for women workers begins, at 1724 Chestnut street, 135 South Third street, 135 South Sixteenth street, 1428 Walnut street and 627 Walnut street. Women of every type are needed, trained or untrained, although in the event of vast numbers applying the professional women will be accepted first. The pay is very good. It is important that women should regard the arsenal work as war work, and not in the light of drudgery.

It is work such as the women of England and France have been doing and which has received the greatest recognition and admiration. It is war work in the truest sense; not so romantic as Red Cross nursing is supposed to be, but a grim, big task, and one that truly patriotic women who can see what war demands will recognize as of vital importance. Mrs. Barclay H. Warburton, chairman of the Emergency Aid, spoke of the effect a special uniform for the arsenal workers and recognition of them by the Government would mean.

"It isn't for any foolish reason that a uniform has an inspiring effect on the women," said Mrs. Warburton. "It is simply the recognition of their work by the public when public recognition and appreciation of services are given. And no one will question that the same instinct which prompts the soldier in the trenches to reverse the uniform, and he would prompt the women here to work with a greater zest than they themselves would be conscious of."

The Emergency Aid is authorized to create such subcommittees as are necessary and to lay out its own plans for handling the work. Thus far plans have been made not only for the recruiting, but for the inspection of the arsenals and comparison in conditions such as they are under women's handling and as they were under Government supervision.

"One thing we found," said Mrs. Warburton, "was that in many factories there are no lunch rooms, nor any place where the girls could go to rest or where they could get a sort of first aid. Already several of our aides have attended to fitting up rooms, and ladies who took a course in nursing, so that they are able to treat the girls for any minor injuries or ills."

Co-operation with other war committees is part of the Emergency Aid's plans, as, for example, with the Visiting Nurses. "Formerly," said Mrs. Warburton, "a girl would come to an employer or to the arsenal, saying that she could work for, perhaps, four months; but that her mother was ill and there was no one to look after the house. Now, in such a case, a visiting nurse would be sent and the girl freed—which, incidentally, will have more than one good side to it, both for the girl and the mother."

The complaint of committees overlapping each other will no longer be called forth, for the work is to be arranged so that it will interlock instead of overlap. Efficiency, without the slightest waste of time or of energy, is all-important for the administration of the vast work that must be done by American women.

Members of the tobacco committee of the American overseas committee of the Emergency Aid were elected yesterday over the good news contained in a letter from Dean Frederick W. Beekman, director of the Soldiers and Sailors Club of Paris. Dean Beekman wrote, under date of May 24, that the Emergency Aid tobacco was coming in with much greater regularity and that the transportation facilities between Paris and the seaports was tremendously improved over what it was a few months ago.

Three weeks before the letter was written Mr. Beekman had succeeded in getting a good supply of tobacco through to our men in the front-line trenches. Subscribers to the tobacco fund, many of whom have been very patiently awaiting some news of the arrival of their gifts, are now receiving every day the return postcards packed in each kit.

The headquarters of the tobacco fund and the Melting Pot, at 1335 Walnut street, will remain open all summer. Larger contributions received during the last week included $134.85, proceeds of a dance given by the Delta Delta Sorority, and another $50 from the Philadelphia Turngemeinde. This is the largest contribution of a similar amount from the latter organization.

Contributions to and expenditures from the various overseas funds of the Emergency Aid to date are as follows:

Q. C. I. M. Club Exhibition

The American fund for the French and American wounded, Quaker City Ladies Motor Club committee, was formally opened May 29. Mrs. Cornelius Stevenson, chairman of the French committee of the Emergency Aid, was present and congratulated the club on its excellent work.

On June 20, from 2 to 6 p. m., Miss Josephine Hayden will be the guest of honor at the exhibition tea. Miss Hayden has just returned from most heroic work at the front.

Mrs. Stevenson will also be present. The exhibition of the magnificent work which is to be sent to France will be a surprise to the members and a great credit to the workers of the committee.
