

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Attends the Opera—She Comments on Various Matters—Miss Sophie Norris Decorated by the French for Canteen Work

ISN'T IT delightful to go to opera these days without having to get all dressed up like a sore finger? And to hear such artists as Florence Easton, Maggie Tevte, Alice Gentle, Henri Scott and the rest?

There was quite a representative audience at the old Academy on Monday night to greet Easton in her role of Leonora in "Il Traviatore," and last night dainty, pretty little Maggie Tevte in the heart-rending role of Butterfly brought down the house.

There were a lot of naval officers and marine corps officers there both nights. Brigadier General Waller, with his wife and several friends, occupied a box and the house was well crowded. Riccardo Martini, who played Pinkerton last night, was in the audience on Monday night.

It's a great idea these artists coming here and giving a regular carnival of opera so late in the season, and I'm sure there were many others who welcomed the idea besides myself, judging from the audience.

I HEAR Susette Ryerson was married "over there" on Saturday. She has been in France for some time, you know, doing bacteriological work and her mother, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, sailed in April with a staff of nurses to equip a new hospital there. Shortly after she arrived the engagement of Susette to Lieutenant George W. Patterson, of Ann Arbor, Mich., was announced. Though the Ryersons only lived here a couple of years, when Millie and Nell came out, their connection with Philadelphia is so wide one feels as interested in their doings as in those of many a Philadelphia-born girl.

Mrs. Ryerson was Miss Emily Borie, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John J. Borie and a sister of Mrs. G. Heide Norris. Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Miss Sophie Borie, Adolph E. Borie and John Borie, Mrs. Norris live in this city and so does Mrs. Rusl. The other members of the family are scattered through the country and the Ryersons have lived in Chicago, New York and Boston as well as here.

Young Arthur Ryerson was killed in an automobile accident at Bryn Mawr five or six years ago. It was when his father and mother were returning to this country on the Titanic to attend his funeral that Mr. Ryerson was drowned, together with George Widener, his son Harry, John B. Thayer, Jr., John Jacob Astor and the rest of those brave men who gave place to the women in the boats that terrible night.

Jack Ryerson, who was then a very small boy, was saved with his mother and two sisters. Will you ever forget the horrors of that news? And now we hear so many horrors day after day we think almost nothing of it. All three Ryerson girls have married since then, and Jack is now at Harvard, or rather is at the Ryerson country home outside of Richfield Springs, New York. They are a most attractive family.

WHILE on the subject of the Borie family, did you know that Sophie Norris, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heide Norris, who has been doing canteen work for the Red Cross "over there," was decorated by the French for very efficient work about six weeks ago? The last I heard of her she was talking of returning home, as her mother has been quite ill, Mrs. Norris, however, has improved again, and perhaps Sophie will stay over longer, as she is doing very fine work.

Talking of the Norries, have you seen their house on Locust street lately? My dears, I thought I "had 'em" the other day as I passed along, for, to behold you, part of the front of the house was ripped right off, and I found that an automobile had "just naturally" walked right up the front wall one night and had taken with it most of the bricks and other accessories to a house. They have actually had to have a part of the front wall torn down and rebuilt. Did you ever?

I wonder what these joy riders will do next?

THE Tommy Atkins fete at Chesterbrook Farm, Major Cassatt's place in Berwyn, take place this afternoon, you know, and I am so glad its clear, as there were a number of features planned for out of doors, and it always seems a shame to have to put a fete of a kind.

Lieutenant Sutton, I understand, has offered two prizes for the men's and women's "putting" contest. There are novices of the British war scenes, and altogether it's very fine.

RUTH JOHNSON is going to give a spinster luncheon on Friday. She is to marry Lieutenant Snowden of Pittsburgh, on Saturday, you know, and has asked twelve of her best friends to come on to the wedding. One, Lucy Emerson, of Titusville, Pa., is to be her maid of honor and only attendant, and the others who are staying with her and with some neighbors, too, will go to the luncheon on Friday as well as the wedding. They would have been bridesmaids had there been time to get them and their dresses together.

There will be one married friend among them, so it's really not an absolute spinster luncheon, but we'll call it so anyhow. Most of the girls are Vassar College graduates, as is Ruth herself. The others besides Lucy Emerson are Eleanor Whiteley, of Baltimore; Miriam Litchfield, of Brookline, Mass.; Katherine Johnston, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Helen Pardee, of Hazleton, Pa.; Mrs. Newbold Noyes, of Boston; Mildred Willard, of Merion, and Mary Duns and Katherine Whitton.

maidenly discretion, remarked, "What did he say? What did he say?" "Oh!" replied brother, "he said 'Thank God she put a 'T' in Chestnut street.'" NANCY WYNNE.

SIX BIBLE PICTURES HAVE STRIKING APPEAL

Work of Abel Pann, Jewish Artist, Shown at Alliance Rooms

Six of the first illustrations for the great biblical series planned by Abel Pann, the Russian Jewish artist, are hung now at the Art Alliance, 1823 Walnut street, in the remarkable collection of his paintings and etchings that is on exhibition there. The collection has been moved from the War Chest headquarters and will be on view at the alliance until June 28.

To put forth an edition of the Bible, for which he shall illustrate fully all the great stories, is the work that Mr. Pann has set himself, and for which he has been preparing himself—a work which will require at least twelve years. The prospect of time does not concern him; in spite of the fact that he has won fame in Europe and has several pictures hung in the Louvre, he is still a young man. The question of whether he is capable of carrying out the work with a consistent grasp and power does not trouble him. He says simply: "You may think it impossible, but I feel I could do justice to the task."

Those who have seen the pictures on exhibition here must realize, in a sense at least, the justice of his faith in himself. That quality in them which must be judged outside the realm of artistic skill and sensitivity reveals an insight into the truth and reality of life that could come only from inspiration.

It is not that Abel Pann has not seen and felt what he has painted. A brief glimpse into the story of his life shows that he has faced the suffering and the horrors that seem to be the heritage of all great men and of the exiled Russian Jew; but the simplicity with which he has dramatized the unrepeatable tragedies is the simplicity of the genius that sees with the keener sight and expresses in a universal language.

The pictures cannot be described; it would be only a clumsy effort at best. They can be seen and felt. They do not appeal to any surface emotion, but reach far deeper, leaving an impression that cannot be thrown off, a sense of unspoken distress and helplessness and kinship with all those in the world who suffer. Perhaps no pictures that have been shown in America have had such power to stir persons with silent appeal.

One look at the face of the artist and at the pictures. Yesterday he was reviewing them, wandering about the room and pausing from time to time before some grim, dark little sketch or before a quaint picture in which gleamed a ray of demure humor. He is small and serene, with gentle blue eyes and a brown beard. As he says, he "doesn't talk much"; all he has to say is easier to say in the pictures. He is shy, or perhaps, it seems so, because he does not speak English and has a hard time making 100 per cent Americans understand him.

He was a rabbi in the Jewish Church. First wanted him to follow in his footsteps, but when Abel Pann had drawn all over many of his finest books he realized that what would be the church's loss might be the world's gain.

Pann ran away from home when he was twelve, raising his funds by the simple method of imitating his father's handwriting in a letter to a friend asking for three rubles. Then came a long, bitter struggle to enter an art school, and the grimmest poverty. Once he spent his last three kopecks for a postal card on which he wrote a pathetic little note to his father appealing for help in his time of despair. Then when he had posted it he remembered that in his mental distress he had forgotten to address it.

Finally came success. A picture was bought by the Luxembourg; he is assured of lasting recognition.

But all this has been preparatory work. He has been to Palestine. It is the country of the wandering, scattered Jewish race, and to Abel Pann it is the real fatherland. Here he has been studying, so that he can draw the pictures for his Bible stories. Although this great work will take many years to complete, small series of the pictures will be exhibited from time to time.

Although he has been working out many of his sketches in Palestine, it was here that he first conceived the idea of illustrating the Bible; and it is hoped that he will be able to continue his work in Philadelphia. It is here that the new Jewish Bible in English was got out. Isaac Leiser made a translation of the Jewish Bible which he was living in Europe. Now translation of many of the Jewish classics is under way. Mr. Pann believes that the time is ripe for the work, and he believes that he must be the man to do it.

Women in War Work

At noon June 26 a meeting of the board of the central committee of the Home Service League will be held at headquarters on Walnut and Seventh streets. Mrs. H. Gordon McCouch is chairman of the board and will preside.

The National League for Women's Service Girls is giving fine service in many branches of war work. The local organization has become a rapidly increasing. At the beginning of the last Liberty Loan drive only fifty were enrolled; now it numbers 300. Mrs. John W. Geary leads them and Mrs. N. Myers Pitter is chairman.

At headquarters of the French war relief on Walnut street are given cheerfully reports of work accomplished and of interest in the work of the committee. Through meetings of committees have discontinued for the summer, the offices are being accepted for adoption according to the conditions. For something more than $36 a year one of the French ladies left orphaned and helpless by the war is given a chance of life. The benefactor is put in direct touch with the beneficiary, child, knows its name and is able to hear how it is progressing under fostering American care.

The central committee of the Home Service League has had an abundance of magazines sent in this week as donations for the boys at the front. Yesterday the censoring department, which numbers eight, and a number of other agencies, with scissors and paste not getting the stories and special articles bound in the form to which they are transported to the front, were sent abroad. This work is carefully done.

It is only those who have taken the oath of allegiance who are permitted to wear a Red Cross uniform. Persons not so taken orders except upon receipt of a duly authorized uniform permit. So the uniform worn by countless jaunty-looking women of Philadelphia is a real guarantee of loyalty and service. Permits for women authorized to wear the uniform are signed by the chairman Mrs. Claude A. Simpler, Mrs. Charles W. Hayland, Mr. Andrew J. Davis, Mr. Thomas V. Farren, Mr. Albert Wunderlich, Mr. William F. Henshaw and Mr. Frederick J. Riley.

A linen shower was given by Mrs. H. T. Lavender on Saturday afternoon for her niece, Miss Sue Hetherington, and her engagement to Mr. William Burdell, of Philadelphia, has been announced. The gifts were hidden in a large ball of gay confetti and then Miss Hetherington opened the room when she discovered them. During the afternoon Miss Ruth Wunderlich entertained the guests with several piano solos and Miss Elizabeth Hetherington sang charmingly. Miss Ruth Decker, Mrs. E. K. Florence, Miss Elizabeth Lawrence, Miss Helen Taylor, Miss Sue Williams, Miss Helen Clark, Miss Ida Lindell, Miss Eleanor Brook, Mrs. E. N. Dutton, Miss Edna Florence, Miss Edna Andrews, Miss Florence Huppel, Miss Dorothy McEwen, Mrs. R. H. Schreiner, Mrs. Edward W. Hetherington, Miss Ruth Devery, Miss Frances McEwen and Miss Bishop.

Another bride-to-be, Miss Katharine Freese, was given a luncheon on Saturday by Mrs. Guy Fackler at her home. Miss French's marriage to Mr. E. Fackler, Jr., will take place next Saturday. The other guests at the luncheon were Mrs. E. Fackler, Mrs. W. E. French, Miss Elizabeth Fackler, Mrs. Sanders, Mrs. William Hubbard, Miss Ruth Decker, Mrs. E. K. Florence, Miss Edna Florence, Miss Mabel Jackson, Mrs. S. French, Mrs. D. Glover, Mrs. McKell, Miss Eleanor Wittmer and Mrs. George Seel.

SAVING RED CROSS EARNED WOMEN

Mrs. Noyes, Nurses' Progress Contends War Aid Proves Right to Suffrage

Mrs. Clara B. Noyes, president of American Nurses' Association, declared work of the Red Cross alone is proof that the American woman deserves the vote. "Five million women," said Mrs. Noyes, "are working today under the flag of the Red Cross. They are contributing labor which is estimated to have a present value of $18,000,000 a year."

"If the Senate could realize the strength of the women are putting into this war, would not delay a day in hastening the passage of the full power for good, but to pass the suffrage amendment immediately?"

"Between 2000 and 4000 nurses are by the Red Cross are now working in the army and navy and civilian population abroad. These women are coming into contact more intimately than any other group with the rank and file of the men and women of Europe. They would be able to carry another message with them if they were true citizens of their great democratic country."

"In his New York speech President Wilson told the full story. 'Women all over the country,' as he said, 'are busy every night and every day doing the work of the Red Cross, the American woman deserves the vote of the American people. There is no other most serious question than to ask: 'If it is a question of women not deserving the vote, their work in the Red Cross is a convincing answer.'"
