Tennis history has repeated itself!
This afternoon Miss Molla Bjurstedt, erstwhile Belle of Norway, but now of New York, and Miss Eleanor Goss, who also claims the big town as her abode will walk out on George Wooley's classic, beautiful and well-kept tennis courts at the Philadelphia Cricket Club with the same thought uppermost in the minds of each.

The single thought which will remain in the minds of these two young women for an hour and possibly longer is that of winning the women's national singles championship for 1918. This is some task and one well worth occupying the thoughts of Miss Bjustedt and Miss Goss.

Today's meeting marks the fifth within a short space of six months on various tennis courts. Off the courts they no doubt have met several hundred times. But titles aren't at stake in these social gatherings and they haven't been recorded.

Should Investigate

Should Investigate

If Miss Molla and Miss Eleanor continue to meet in the final round of many more tournaments for some title or other of the courts then it is possible that the United States Government will be called upon to investigate the conditions to see if they have, in an underhanded manner, formed a partnership to monopolize tennis honors in this country.

If they have then Miss Molla has been treating her partner cruelly. In the four tourneys in which they met to decide some championahip the Norse wonder has refused to split 50-50. Instead, she has takenal the honors and has put the crown robes in her ward-robe. Perhaps this afternoon it is Miss Eleanor's turn to win. The title at stake today is worth more than the other quartet combined and a victory for Miss Goss will more than even up the summer's spoils.

Miss Bjurstedt Favorite

If the alleged trust has decided not to use its influence on today's match, then it is the consensus of opinion that Miss Bjurstedt will once more humble her repeated challenger, and, incidentally, retain her hold on the singles championship, which she won two seasons ago.

The spectators who braved the adverse weather conditions yesterday, which were more suitatble for football than tennis, had the opportunity of comparing the various styles of play of Miss Bjurstedt and Miss Goss, with Miss Marion Zinderstein, of Boston, played Miss Bjurstedt and Mrs. Johan Rogge, of Norway, in the final round of the women's doubles.

Goss and Partner Win Title

Of course, the main thing connected with this match was the heroic work of each team. Miss Zinderstein and Miss Goss triumphed, and this morning are laboring under the handicap of carcontent was the respective play-matches yesterday and showed an immatches yesterday and showed an improxed form, especially in the earlier matches. If she shows as much improvement in this afternoon's match she has a chance of taking the title away from Molla. Otherwise not. Her service was fine, her backhand and forearm drives were well nigh beyond criticism and her bobbing was fairly good.

Mustn't Boot Easy Chances

But there is one thing she must not do this afternoon. That is fall down on easy shots at the most critical times. This has been the cause of her four defeats from Miss Bjurstedt. At times her play borders on the sensational and difficult chances are made to look easy, but it is the casy ones that she boots.

A little more care at these critical moments will make her a dangerous opponent all the time. As for Miss Bjurstedt, she is the same as ever and that

Junior Tourney a Success

Julian S. Myrick, of New York, the vice president of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, is to be congratulated on the fine showing of the girls' junior tourney. Last win-ter Myrick conceived the idea that it would be a great thing, for many rea-sons, to foster the development of tennis among the younger girls,

He brought the subject up for discussion at the annual meeting of the body, with the result that the delegates with the result that the delegates thought the same as he did and consequently it was decided to hold a national championship tourney for girls. This first tourney was awarded to the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Yesterday the final round was played Yesterday the final round was played. Play was scheduled to begin at 2:30. Mr. Joseph Jennings, chairman of the tourney, received word that Mr. Myrick was on his way to this city with the intentions of seeing the final round between two members of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, Miss Catherine Porter and Miss Dorothy Walker.

Postponed Starting Time

His train wasn't due to arrive until past the scheduled starting time. Upon the consent of both finalists Mr. Jennings postponed the match until Mr. Myrick arrived. To show their appreciation of his efforts to develop girls' tennis the chairman and players invited Mr. Myrick to referee. He gladly accepted the invitation.

Mr. Myrick was pleased and equally as well surprised at the fine work of both girls. After Miss Porter had dempoth girls. After Miss Porter had demonstrated her superiority in two hotly fought sets, 6-3, 5-6, Mr. Myrick said: "I am more than pleased with the result of the first junior girls' title play. Miss Porter and Miss Walker surely are wonderful players for their age, and if they continue to improve I see titles in store for them. In fact, the entire tourney has been handled splendidly and is a grand
