THE STORY THIS FAR
HUGH RENWICK, under secretary of the Austrian government...

CHAPTER II
The Fighting Kingbirds
Peggy is summoned to attend the trial of Blue Jay for stealing General Bredford's bride...

CHAPTER X (Continued)
THERE was another silence in which Captain Goritz took out another cigarette...

"Goodnight, Liebchen," he said.
for she rose and mechanically made her dispositions for sleep...

The Crows raved excitedly toward Peggy's train. The Bluebirds, the Warblers, and the Tanagers seemed such easy prey that they were keen to attack...

"Two," said Judge Owl. "The fine is paid."
carried a club larger than that of Officer Martin...

"Tomorrow will be described the opening of the trial, and the strange person in which Peggy finds herself."

"I do not believe you," she said.
"Dear to music—blind to beauty," sighed Marishka...

"I know nothing more than I have told you," Renwick replied.
The Kingbirds added to the confusion by hovering above the struggling bunch of Crows...

CHAPTER XXXVII
Between Life and Death
WHEN the last of the newspaper men had gone, Victor telephoned the hospital...

"Really?" laughed Bert. "Your wife is a dear, but..."
"Go out and join me soon if I don't get home first..."

"CAP" STUBBS—It Was Mailed, All Right
"HEAT A MINUTE. I'LL GIVE YOU THE NAME OF THE PERSON WHO SENT IT TO YOU."

CHAPTER XI
The Man in Black
IT WAS after dark when the train bearing Herr Windt and Renwick reached the Franz Josef station...

Great demand for the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER may cause you to miss an installment of this very interesting story...

CHAPTER XXXVI (Continued)
AND in there no power I can employ to keep you from doing that?" inquired the lawyer quickly...

"Mother! Mother!" she assured. "Mr. Rollinson will save father; he will save me too."

"I do not promise that," said Victor. "I would try," qualified Victor.
Mrs. Aurenstky's feeling of awe and faith...

CHAPTER XXXVII
Between Life and Death
WHEN the last of the newspaper men had gone, Victor telephoned the hospital...

"I do not see..." interrupted Victor.
"Here! Here!" he commanded. "Sit down. Every last one of you sit down."

By EDWINA
The interview he gave was, therefore, circumstantially complete, and stickler, though writing men stiffly extended it. He declined to talk about the details of the disaster...
