

Evening Public Ledger

Philadelphia, Friday, June 28, 1918

Camp Dix Doughboys Delight in Stunts That Break the Monotony of a Soldier's Life

A HUMAN LIBERTY BELL was formed by 25,000 men on training field at Camp Dix. Above, the bell is in process of formation. Photograph to left shows men thronging to barracks after break-up alignment.

MOST EVERY ONE at Camp Dix knows Captain Moore, exchange officer at the Wrightstown cantonment.

MOST WELCOME of all orders to the man in training is the "at ease" following a strenuous drill or hike.

STUNTS ARE ALWAYS popular with the men during their leisure hours, and are invariable when the camera man appears. A group of the boys in the 153d depot brigade.

IT TAKES ALL KINDS of units to make up an army. For instance, above are the doctors, or "pillboys" as the soldiers know them, attached to the 153d depot brigade. Over to the left some of the lads who look after war-risk insurance at Camp Dix are taking a few risks themselves. Below, a contingent of draftees is learning how to salute.

OVER THE TOP for the fun of it, and not exactly a part of the program to make the world safe for democracy.

