among the feams which will play base-ball on July 4. Two hundred women were engaged in this work. The appeal for uniforms reached the Red Cross workrooms last Friday, after the camp authorities had bought up every available uniform in the sporting goods stores of London and other large English cities. The committee in charge of the workrooms called for volunteers from the large number of women employed there making surgical dressing. The 260 volunteers gave up the whole of Saturday and Sunday to finish the
