"I came here for a showdown and I'll promise you on the word of Provost Marshal General Crowder and the Governor of the State that not a guilty man escapes."

"If it takes 10,000,000 men to do it we will raise them, and we hope to get all of them from Class 1, so that no married man whose wife and family is dependent upon him or who is essential to industry will be taken."

URGES PROFITS TAX BE ON SUBSIDIARIES

United Business Men's Representative Appears Before Congressional Committee

Congress was urged this afternoon to make provision in the new revenue bill for making the underlying corporations of street railway companies pay the excess profits tax instead of the parent concerns.

This plea was made by Edward S. Martin, vice president of the United States Business Men's Association of this city, who was given a hearing in Washington by the House Ways and Means Committee.

It is the apparent intention of the Ways and Means Committee to levy excess profits taxes on operating companies instead of underlying corporations.

Mr. Martin did not directly represent the P. R. T. at the hearing, but his views are said to be in harmony with those of the company, which wishes the excess profits tax put on its underlying corporations.

After arguing the question from a legal viewpoint, Martin and Oscar Beasly offered an amendment to the revenue bill, providing for their contention, which the committee will take under advisement.

The Philadelphia cited many legal precedents for the underlying companies of the P. R. T. to pay the excess profits taxes.

Permit to build the pier will probably be granted.

GOVERNMENT WIRE OWNERSHIP NOW URGED AS WAR MEASURE

They had not been serious and would be reduced under Government control.

Postmaster General Burleson, who clearly indicated that he expects the wire to be placed under control of his department if they are taken over, added the argument that the Government could run the lines cheaper and more efficiently than private lines.

Burleson said he was against domestic censorship of mail messages, just as he was opposed to placing the telegraph and telephone lines under Government control.

Mr. Baker said he could not say with certainty whether the Government could completely suppress improper communications but it certainly could suppress such communications better than under present laws.

Representative Parker, New Jersey, asked whether it would not be well to amend the emergency trading act to give the President full power to take over control of the wires if necessary.

The Secretary declined to commit himself on whether the Government should assume permanent control, but he opposed any time limit being fixed for the surrender to owners of the lines.

He replied to a question put by Representative Cooper, of Ohio, Burleson declared emphatically that he did not oppose Government ownership of the telegraph and telephone lines.

"I believe telegraph employees are as patriotic as I am," Burleson returned.

Burleson said that while he opposed Government ownership as an abstract proposition, he would favor it if it were for a brief time, would seriously interfere with all of our war activities.

Replying to a question from Representative Hamilton, of Michigan, Mr. Baker said the Government has no force "in the slightest degree adequate" for operating the lines in the event the lines were taken over by the Government.

The American army in France is operating 4000 miles of telegraph and telephone lines, Mr. Baker told the committee.

"I cannot imagine any more serious interruption to our war preparations than suspension of telegraph service," said Mr. Baker.

Replying to a question from Representative Hamilton, of Michigan, Mr. Baker said the Government has no force "in the slightest degree adequate" for operating the lines in the event the lines were taken over by the Government.

The legislation was discussed among Senate leaders of both parties today at informal conferences. Several predicted that if the resolution is passed by the House it also would be approved by the Senate and with comparatively brief debate.

Although there will be some opposition by those against extension of Government ownership and operation of utilities, the opinion was advanced by a representative, would favor it if it were for a brief time, would seriously interfere with all of our war activities.

Mr. Daniels declared it would be much easier to take the telegraph and telephone lines than it is to operate the mails.

Mr. Daniels said that when he wrote his letter to Chairman Sims advocating the resolution he did not know there was a possibility of a strike on the West coast and had the telegraph and telephone lines taken over by the Government.

Judge Advocate General and the War Department's Commission on the Training Camps Activities, also provide that no liquor shall be furnished to soldiers or sailors in private houses, even though the enlisted men may be members of the family, but not in the house.

Hereafter it was permissible to give liquor to both officers and men of both branches of the service in private homes, but not in the dry-zone established around all army cantonments.

The new regulations, which supersede all former regulations except the regulation of March 2, 1918, relating to the island of Oahu, Territory of Hawaii, are as follows:

"First—Around every military camp at which officers and enlisted men, not fewer than two hundred and fifty in number, have been or will be stationed for more than thirty consecutive days, there shall be for the purposes set forth in this regulation a zone five miles wide, except that within the existing boundaries of an incorporated city or town, within which the sale of alcoholic liquor shall not be prohibited by the State or local law, the zone shall not include any territory more than one-half mile from the nearest boundary of such camp.

Alcoholic liquor, including beer, ale and wine, shall not be sold, bartered, given, served or knowingly delivered by any person to any individual in any such zone, or transported, transmitted, carried or transported to any place within any such zone, provided that regulation shall not apply to the sale or serving of such liquor in a private home to members of the family or bona fide guests, other than members of the military forces, or to the sending of liquor by express, carrying or transporting of such liquor to a private home for use as aforesaid provided that this regulation shall not apply to the sale or serving of such liquor by registered pharmacists to licensed physicians or medical officers of the United States for medical purposes.

In the sale of such liquor, carrying, or transporting of such liquor to registered pharmacists, licensed physicians, or medical officers of the United States for medical purposes, the person so selling, carrying, or transporting such liquor shall be held to the same standard as if he were a member of the military forces, and shall be liable to the same penalties as if he were a member of the military forces.

"Second—Alcoholic liquor, including beer, ale and wine, either alone or with any other article, shall not, directly or indirectly, be sold, bartered, given, served or knowingly delivered to any officer or member of the military forces, within the United States, their territories or possessions, or any place under their control, except to medical officers for medical purposes or when administered by or under the direction of a medical officer, or to any member of the military forces for medical purposes, at any military station, cantonment, camp, fort or post.

"Third—The sale of supply of intoxicating liquors to licensed physicians and medical officers for medical purposes, or to any member of the military forces for medical purposes, at any military station, cantonment, camp, fort or post, shall be held to the same standard as if he were a member of the military forces, and shall be liable to the same penalties as if he were a member of the military forces.

"Fourth—All prior violations of former regulations and all penalties incurred thereunder shall be prosecuted by the Government, and shall be held to the same effect as if these superceding regulations had not been established.
