A war correspondent in the Piave front, describing the Austrian defeat...

"The Italian army," he writes, "has swept away the bridges which cannot be raised...

"The guns of the defense bank from the bank and fragments of their armor...

"Like Sisyphus multiplied a hundredfold, the bridge builders work incessantly...

"The divisions under the green tentacles of Montello, which resembles...

"The troops settle themselves firmly in the Italian trenches and extend a wall...

"The one foot bridge is retained. A last, the weather closes up, but renewed tempests of rain lead the bridge away again...

"The German Emperor has distributed iron crosses galore among the American forces holding new lines westward of Hill 203...

"A few Americans seen had the medals clutched by the enemy pinned in the center of their shirts...

"The men said that some of the crosses had been given voluntarily by the Germans when they were asked for them...

"The officer thought the American in-
