

Evening Public Ledger

and
THE EVENING TELEGRAPH

Philadelphia, Friday, July 12, 1918

MANY KINDNESSES LIGHTEN THE BURDEN OF A SOLDIER'S LIFE OVER HERE AND AGAIN "OVER THERE"

PLEASANT MEMORIES of kind women and good things to eat and drink accompany the soldiers who are fortunate enough to have their troop trains pause in Philadelphia.

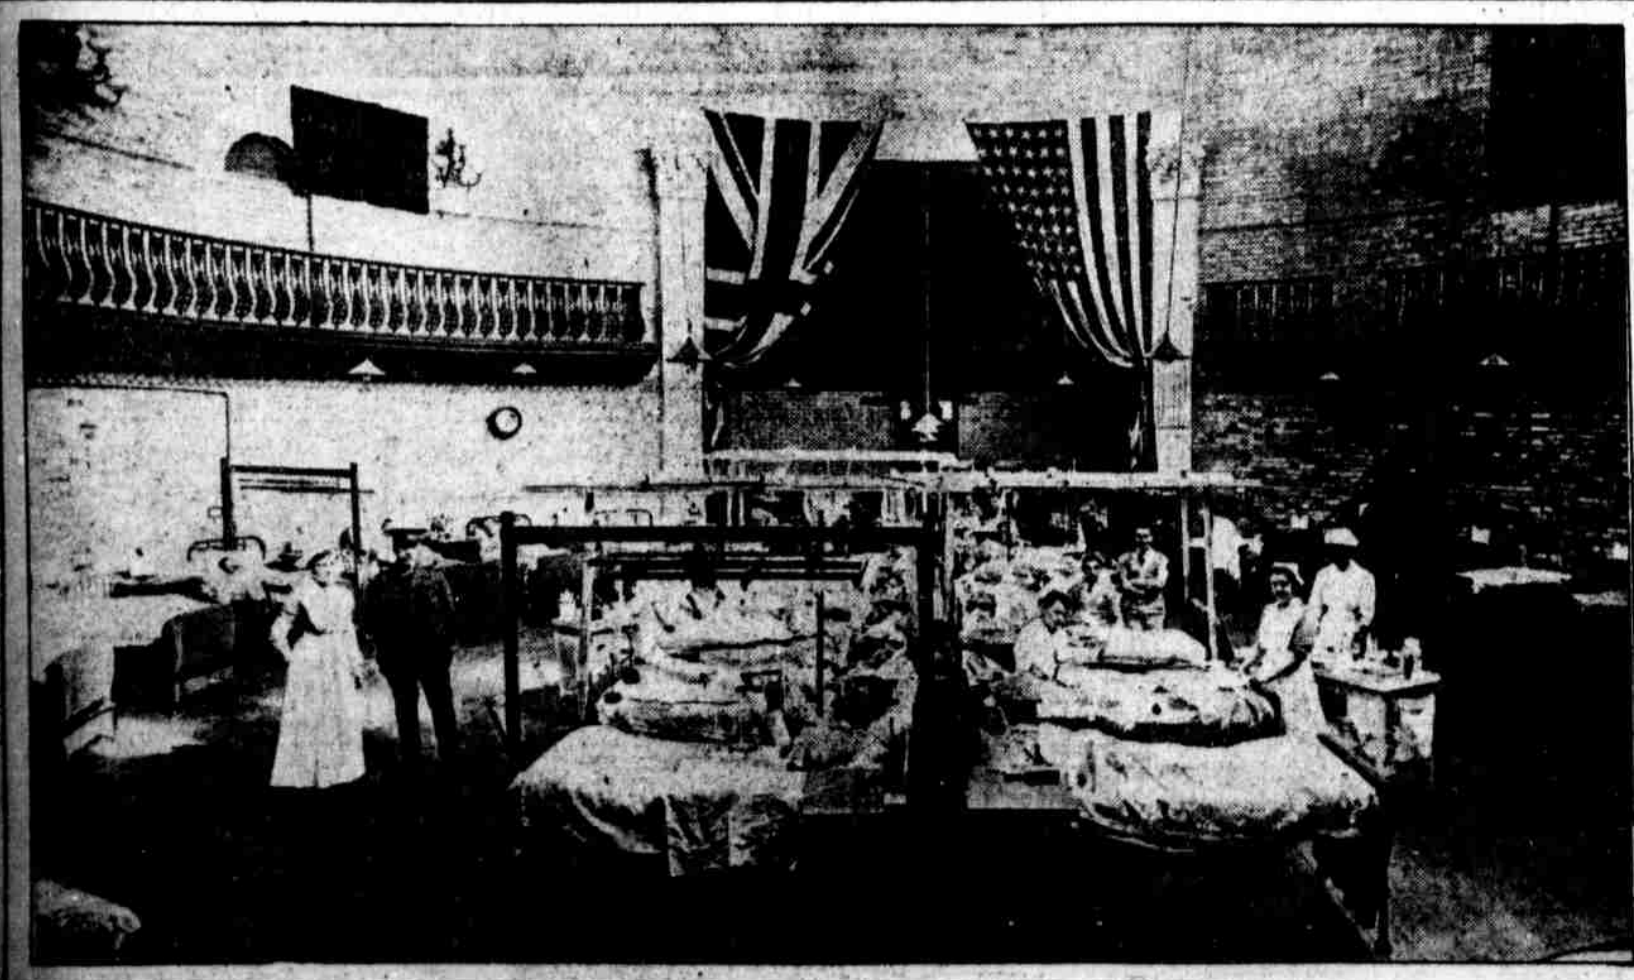

BETWEEN TRAINS these good women chat or prepare food and drink for other contingents to be sent cheerfully on their way "over there."

A TOOTHsome SANDWICH or a drink of refreshing lemonade awaits each soldier who extends his hand or cup from the car window.

ACROSS THE SEAS, at Paignton, England, American soldiers who have been to France and suffered wounds are recuperating in a veritable fairyland.

EQUALLY AS ATTRACTIVE as the grounds surrounding the American hospital at Paignton, England, are the wards within, where young Americans are recovering from war wounds.

YOUNG AMERICAN NURSES who are caring for wounded Yankee soldiers at the American hospital at Paignton, England, also respond to the scarcity of man-power by mowing the grass on the hospital lawn.