

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Red Cross Has Big Drive On for Knitted Articles—Miss Morris Takes Course at Amherst College—"He" and "She" Go Out for a Motor Spin

WISH it had stayed cool, but it didn't; and that makes it hard to knit, doesn't it? And yet there's a drive on for knitters at the various Red Cross auxiliaries.

Only recently I read an article in one of the current magazines against knitting. It quoted an English officer, and said among other things that he personally had never seen a soldier wear a sweater nor a helmet.

Well, it caused much excitement in Red Cross circles, because a number of the workers read this article and said, "If we are wasting time, give us something else to do."

But the very best answer to it all is that the Red Cross has sent out a call for sweaters, socks and helmets, and has assigned a certain number to each auxiliary, and they all have to be done by September 20.

It looks as if there was something to question in these magazine articles, does it not, when only one auxiliary supplies that much?

Even in July the auxiliary at 608 is as busy as a bee. They have two Liberty Bonds now that they are selling on shares for the benefit of the canteen work which is connected with the workroom.

It takes time and it takes attention to make them such successes and personal interests from those at the head of these undertakings. Mrs. George H. Lorimer is chairman of this one, and is in there every day attending to all the executive work, and she is ably seconded by her committee, too.

DID you know that Natalie Morris, of Chestnut Hill, is taking an agricultural course at Amherst College? She has had trouble with her eyes and was forced to give up her painting for a while. She had a studio here in town, you know, and was doing awfully clever work.

It's always interesting to hear about people who used to live here and have moved to another city, don't you think? So perhaps you'll be interested to hear something about Marjorie Thomas Pomeroy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Lewis Thomas, of Pelham road, Germantown.

NO, IT wasn't a scene being enacted for a movie, at all. There was a real "he" and a real "she" not reel ones, you understand, and it really did happen. You see, it was this way. He had asked her to go for a ride with him in his good-looking tan car, and as they were spinning along ever so smoothly and happily she exclaimed:

"Oh, how I wish I could drive like you do!"

"You could if you tried," he remarked nonchalantly, not thinking what he was saying himself into; for guess what she said next?

"Oh, thanks, I'd love to."

"So there was nothing for him to do but get down the car and hand over the wheel to her, with some few misgivings, which he did try to conceal. But he liked that car, you know; it was a good car and he hadn't had it very long, so he'd hate to see it get all—oh, well, what was the use of worrying? He liked the girl better."

So they started off, he murmuring sweet nothings in her ear about gears and brakes and when to use the clutch, and she having the time of her young life showing how clever she was at driving a car. You could tell it was the first time she had ever done it for she had that peculiar half-scared, half-radiantly-triumphant expression on her face that told you so even more eloquently than her driving, which was really quite good.

asked him again that day to let her "try it," don't you? NANCY WYNNE.

OBSERVE BELGIUM'S DAY NEXT

New York Also Will Celebrate Little Nation's Independence

THE "LITTEST" RED CROSS WORKER

Little Hope Stoever, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip F. Stoever, of Ambler, seems very much in earnest, even if she is only thirteen months old. If she remains as purposeful as the years go on, the soldier boys will surely have plenty of socks and sweaters.

Sailors Also Have Part in Annual Outing Given by Ellis A. Gimbel

The ninth annual outing for orphaned children held by Ellis A. Gimbel was conducted today at the Philmont Country Club. Besides 175 children, Mr. Gimbel today had as his guests many men from the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

The sailors took a baseball team to the outing and one of the principal things on the sport program was the ball game between the seamen and the Jewish Foster Home team. Races and other games also were on the program. The winning team in the baseball game received a banner.

The Branchtown Orphans' Home track team contended with the Jewish Foster Home runners. Special races for boys and girls also were a feature.

Scoutcraft was exhibited by crack troops of Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts.

A special train this morning took the children from Germantown to the club. The program began immediately after the children arrived. Lunch was served to them.

WOMAN'S WAR SERVICE SHOWS NO ABATEMENT

Comfort Kit Committee and the Junior Corps Report Increase in Work and Membership

Reports just turned in by various committees of the National League for Woman's Service show that organization has not been lagging in war work.

In the last two months the comfort kits committee of the National League for Woman's Service has made and given 165 kits to departing Philadelphia boys, in addition to an almost equal number of sweaters and socks. It now has ready fifty-two kits, fifty-two sweaters and fifty-two pairs of socks, which will be given to Local Draft 27 for the men leaving that district July 20.

The Junior Service Corps of the organization, started little more than six months ago with sixty members, now includes 250 girls, 250 of whom are in uniform. All of them are at the call of any recognized war organization. Two members are on duty each day at 1763 Walnut street, the State office of the National League for Woman's Service.

During the Liberty Loan campaign the Junior Service Corps covered all the motion-picture houses and theatres in central Philadelphia, besides running a booth of its own in front of the Franklin Bank Building. There were about eighty-five girls on duty every day and they raised $4,000.00.

The girls had a rummage sale at 716 Market street, where they cleared $225, which is to be used for the running expenses of the State office.

Plan Postponed Flag-Raising

A meeting of the representatives of the local manufacturing plants, Red Cross societies, fraternal and patriotic societies and G. O. The large flag was contributed by the Sauquoit plant, through its secretary and treasurer, Mr. Walter H. Rossmassler, and the steel pole, seventy-three feet high, was the donation of the manufacturing industries of the community.

WEDDING IN GERMANTOWN THIS AFTERNOON AT FOUR

Miss Ruth Eisenhower and Mr. Jay S. Jones Married at Home of Bride

An attractive wedding this afternoon was that of Miss Ruth Eisenhower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rose Eisenhower, of Kitchener's lane, Germantown, and Mr. Jay S. Jones, United States aviation corps, of New York. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock by the Rev. Stewart P. Keeling at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Eisenhower, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Mrs. John Bromley as matron of honor, by her sister, Miss Mildred F. Eisenhower, as maid of honor, and by Miss Wynne Ann Mroczka as flower girl. Master Douglas Jones was the ring bearer. Mr. John Bromley was the best man. There were no ushers.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, with an overdress and standing collar of lace and a tulle veil. She carried white orchids and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor wore green organdie with a hat and carried sweet peas and larkspur. The maid of honor wore lavender organdie, with a hat to match, and carried sweet peas and larkspur. The flower girl selected blue organdie and carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

The wedding was followed by a small reception. It was planned to have the ceremony on the lawn if the weather permitted.

MOUGRIAN-FRANKLIN

The wedding of Miss Margaret C. Franklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George R. H. Franklin, of 1031 North Twelfth street, and Mr. George L. She was attended by her sister, Miss Nellie Franklin, who wore a white net frock, with a pink sash and a leghorn hat, trimmed with pink roses.

Mr. John McGuigan was his brother's best man. The ceremony was followed by a breakfast for the two families at the home of the bride's mother. The bridegroom and bride left for Atlantic City, and will be at home after August 1 at 454 North Twelfth street.

NEALL-MOORE

An interesting military wedding was that of Miss Estelle M. Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Moore, of 509 South Forty-eighth street, and Captain Edwin Earle Neall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin T. Neall, of 1828 West Ontario street, on Saturday at the home of the officiating clergyman, the Rev. S. W. Chevrolet, D. D., on Mount Airy. The bride wore her traveling suit of dark blue, with a braided hat to match, and was attended by Miss Lillian Brod, who wore a tan suit with a hat to match. After the ceremony Captain Neall and his bride left for a short trip.

The bridegroom, who is captain of the Armed Guard on the transport between New York and France, has returned from his third trip overseas and has been granted a short furlough.

ARONSON-GOLDSMITH

Another military wedding of interest was that of Miss Sarah S. Goldsmith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Goldsmith, of 1922 North Nineteenth street, and Captain Joseph D. After the service Captain Aronson and his bride left for Fort Sill.

MEETING 80 RECRUIT NURSES

War Workers Will Discuss Plans at New Century Club

War workers in all branches of the service are invited to attend a meeting tonight, when ways and means of recruiting nurses will be considered. The meeting, which will be held at the New Century Club at 8 p. m., will be under the direction of Miss Roberta West, chairman of the standing committee on nurses. Mrs. H. S. Prentiss Nichols will preside.

The surgeon general of the army, the United States Public Health Service and the American Red Cross have requested the cooperation of the women's committee of the Council of National Defense in the matter of recruiting young women for the United States Student Nurse Reserve, which is now regarded as a subject of vital importance.

It is urged that there is the greatest need for nurses, for work on both sides of the water, and a need that the young women entering the work shall see it in a serious light, with a sense of duty and of the responsibility which the nation offers them.

WHAT A CONGRESSMAN SEES

A Semi-weekly Letter Touching on the Washington Doings of Personalities Familiar to Philadelphians

By J. Hampton Moore

Washington, July 17.

A SURVEY of the political situation in Washington finds President Wilson on guard at the White House, sending out occasional letters to Senators or members of Congress couched in such terms as to lead many Republicans to wonder how far they ought to go in supporting the President without reserve. It cannot be denied that the Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy, behind whom all patriotic Americans desire to stand in the war, is not entirely oblivious of his political strength. Neither are the departments, boards and commissions, which now operate under his direction. They seem to feel that the winning of the war is dependent upon the continuance of existing political conditions.

The Republicans generally take issue with the political views of those who are in power and who are endeavoring to perpetuate it, but they lack that sort of "cohesiveness" which David H. Lane, of Philadelphia, would hold to be essential to party success. They are afraid, to be right, frank about it, that any real assault upon the political battlements of the Administration would be regarded as unpatriotic, and for that reason little is done by way of investigating those mistakes of Government which heavily tax the people.

During the last two or three weeks sporadic outbreaks have occurred, like the House resolutions uncovering the eligibles for army and navy service who were barred by appointment in the various departments, and the assault of Senator Penrose and others on the seemingly unnecessary appropriations for big-hunters in the Department of Agriculture. The President, if he noticed those momentary uprisings, however, came back vigorously with veto messages on certain measures, which, put to the test, found him sustained by both houses.

In a letter to Representative Sims, which the House Democrats succeeded in keeping out of the Congressional Record, the President, in advocating the passage of the water-power bill, actually went so far as to urge the members of the lower house to urge their kindly offices with the Senators to bring them to terms. It is a rule of the House that no Senator shall be mentioned by name in House debates, so that the President's letter came perilously near to a violation of the rule.

Notwithstanding the Executive's wartime hold upon the legislative body, it is plain that if the Senate or the House could free itself for a brief spell from the fear of appearing disloyal, there would be doings on the hill that would crowd the galleries.

THAT Philadelphia Civil Service Commission, which was headed by Frank M. Ritter during the Blankenburg Administration, is numerously represented in the war service. In the ordnance department we have Louis Van Dusen, who was one of the commissioners. He has a good deal to do with the personnel, which means appointments to the service. Arthur Swanson, who was chief examiner, is also in the ordnance department.

Other examiners of the Philadelphia board who qualified for the ordnance branch were Elmer Goebert and John Costello. J. A. Carlin, who was for a while registrar of the Bureau of Water under Mayor Blankenburg, figures actively in ordnance, while Graham Starr, another Philadelphia civil service examiner, has to do with camp publicity. And these are not all of the Blankenburg appointees who have donned uniforms in Washington.

WHEN the Bourne announced a canal project across the State of New Jersey to connect Philadelphia with the Atlantic Ocean at Barnegat Inlet and the gentle reader thought he had fallen upon lives news, Joseph M. Huston, of Lehigh lane, Germantown, architect of the State Capitol at Harrisburg, which was built, and designer of a William Penn bridge across the Delaware, which has not been built, was not deceived.

Years ago, when the mere reference to such a project was deemed chimerical, Joe Huston prepared plans for a straight cut across New Jersey, entering into details so far as to show his ships from ocean to city, propelled by trolley and moving like cars on standard time. Subsequently Governor Pennypacker publicly advocated some such canal as Huston had in mind.

All this was before the Atlantic Deep-sea Waterways Association gave impetus to the northeast project from the Delaware River to New York Bay and the continuance thereof by way of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal to Chesapeake Bay and points south. To open up a new cross-State canal agitation now, however, after the approval of the United States army engineers has been won for the association project, and after the existing Delaware and Raritan Canal to New York has been taken over by the director general of railroads, could only be interpreted as an impediment to the main line.

There was a big warehouse terminal to the ocean canal in the Huston dream; but this, like the bridge project, was rather ahead of the times than behind them. The utilization of the Delaware and Raritan Canal by the Government was facilitated because the complications arising with respect to the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal were not encountered. The Pennsylvania Railroad held the canal under a lease for 999 years. As the Government held the Pennsylvania Railroad, the rest was easy.

WE KNEW it in Washington before it was announced in Philadelphia, that John P. Connelly, the City Solicitor, had planned to go to France for field work among the Knights of Columbus in the army. In all such cases it is necessary to comply with the State Department regulations respecting passports, and this formality had to be attended to here. As the war responsibility of the Government increases the chances for getting abroad grow less and no passports are now issued except very good cause be shown.

The City Solicitor, he whom Senator Granback and other Eleventh Warders refuse to know by any title less endearing than "Our John," was modest enough in making his application. He was going to respond to the call of duty; he was going to give over his high office for the time being, and he was going to yield up its emoluments; but he did not care to say more about it—let that go until he was on his way. Surely, Senator McNichol would like to have lived to see John off.

MARINE 31 YEARS, GIVES SON TO WAR

Man, 64, Regrets He Cannot Serve United States Himself

Enthusiasm born of thirty years of service in the United States Marine's grime Charles Wermuth, 2610 South Hicks street, when the marine recruiting campaign started this week, and, unable to enlist himself because of his advanced age, he today presented his eighteen-year-old son, Charles J. Wermuth, as a candidate for the ranks of the "soldiers of the sea."

The youthful Wermuth was readily accepted, and is now a regularly enlisted member of the "devil dogs." His father is sixty-four years old.

The marine recruiting campaign continues without abatement today. Additional reports of the success of the American army in beating back the German drive have increased the enthusiasm of prospective soldiers, and another large number were on hand early at the recruiting station, 1409 Arch street.

Philadelphia's quota in the country-wide drive of the marines to add 25,000 to their numbers is 1000, and the local recruiting of fliers are enthusiastic about getting this number.

TROOPS AT HANCOCK GET LAKE TO BATHE IN

Camp Community Service Provides Facilities for Dip After Hard Day

It is hot down in Georgia. Nobody is more uncomfortably aware of that than Private Smith and his tens of thousands of comrades who sweater through drills at Camp Hancock, near Augusta.

Viewing with expert eye Camp Hancock and its perspiring thousands, War Camp Community Service saw this: realized what a boon would be a bathing place, and, because of the number of camp and the community Service to provide what is good for soldiers' minds and bodies, set about to make a reality out of the dream of those men in khaki.

Today Camp Hancock bathes; Camp Hancock swims, dives and otherwise disports itself in clear, cool water. A walk of ten minutes from the center of camp and the soldier may plunge overboard with such gratification as can be imagined only by those who have dipped in lake or sea after a tiring day of work and heat.

AMERICANS NURSE OUR MEN

Red Cross Aid From United States in Every French Hospital

To care for American wounded sent from the French sectors to French military hospitals, the American Red Cross has assigned one of its Red Cross nurses, and a French and English-speaking Red Cross aid to every French hospital caring for our men, according to a report just received from Paris.

Before these nurses were assigned some of our men who had been fighting in French regiments arrived at institutions where no one could speak English.

Now every American on reaching a French hospital is to be received by an American Red Cross nurse who attends to his reception and care. If the nurse cannot speak French, her aid interprets for the French hospital staff. The aid also attends to correspondence for our wounded. The nurse and aid visit every American patient frequently, to give treatments, cheer him up, attend to his correspondence or to explain his needs to the French attendants. This plan has worked so well that the Service de Sante, the Medical Department of the French Government, has requested the Red Cross to have ready such teams to place in every hospital receiving American men.
