

Evening Public Ledger

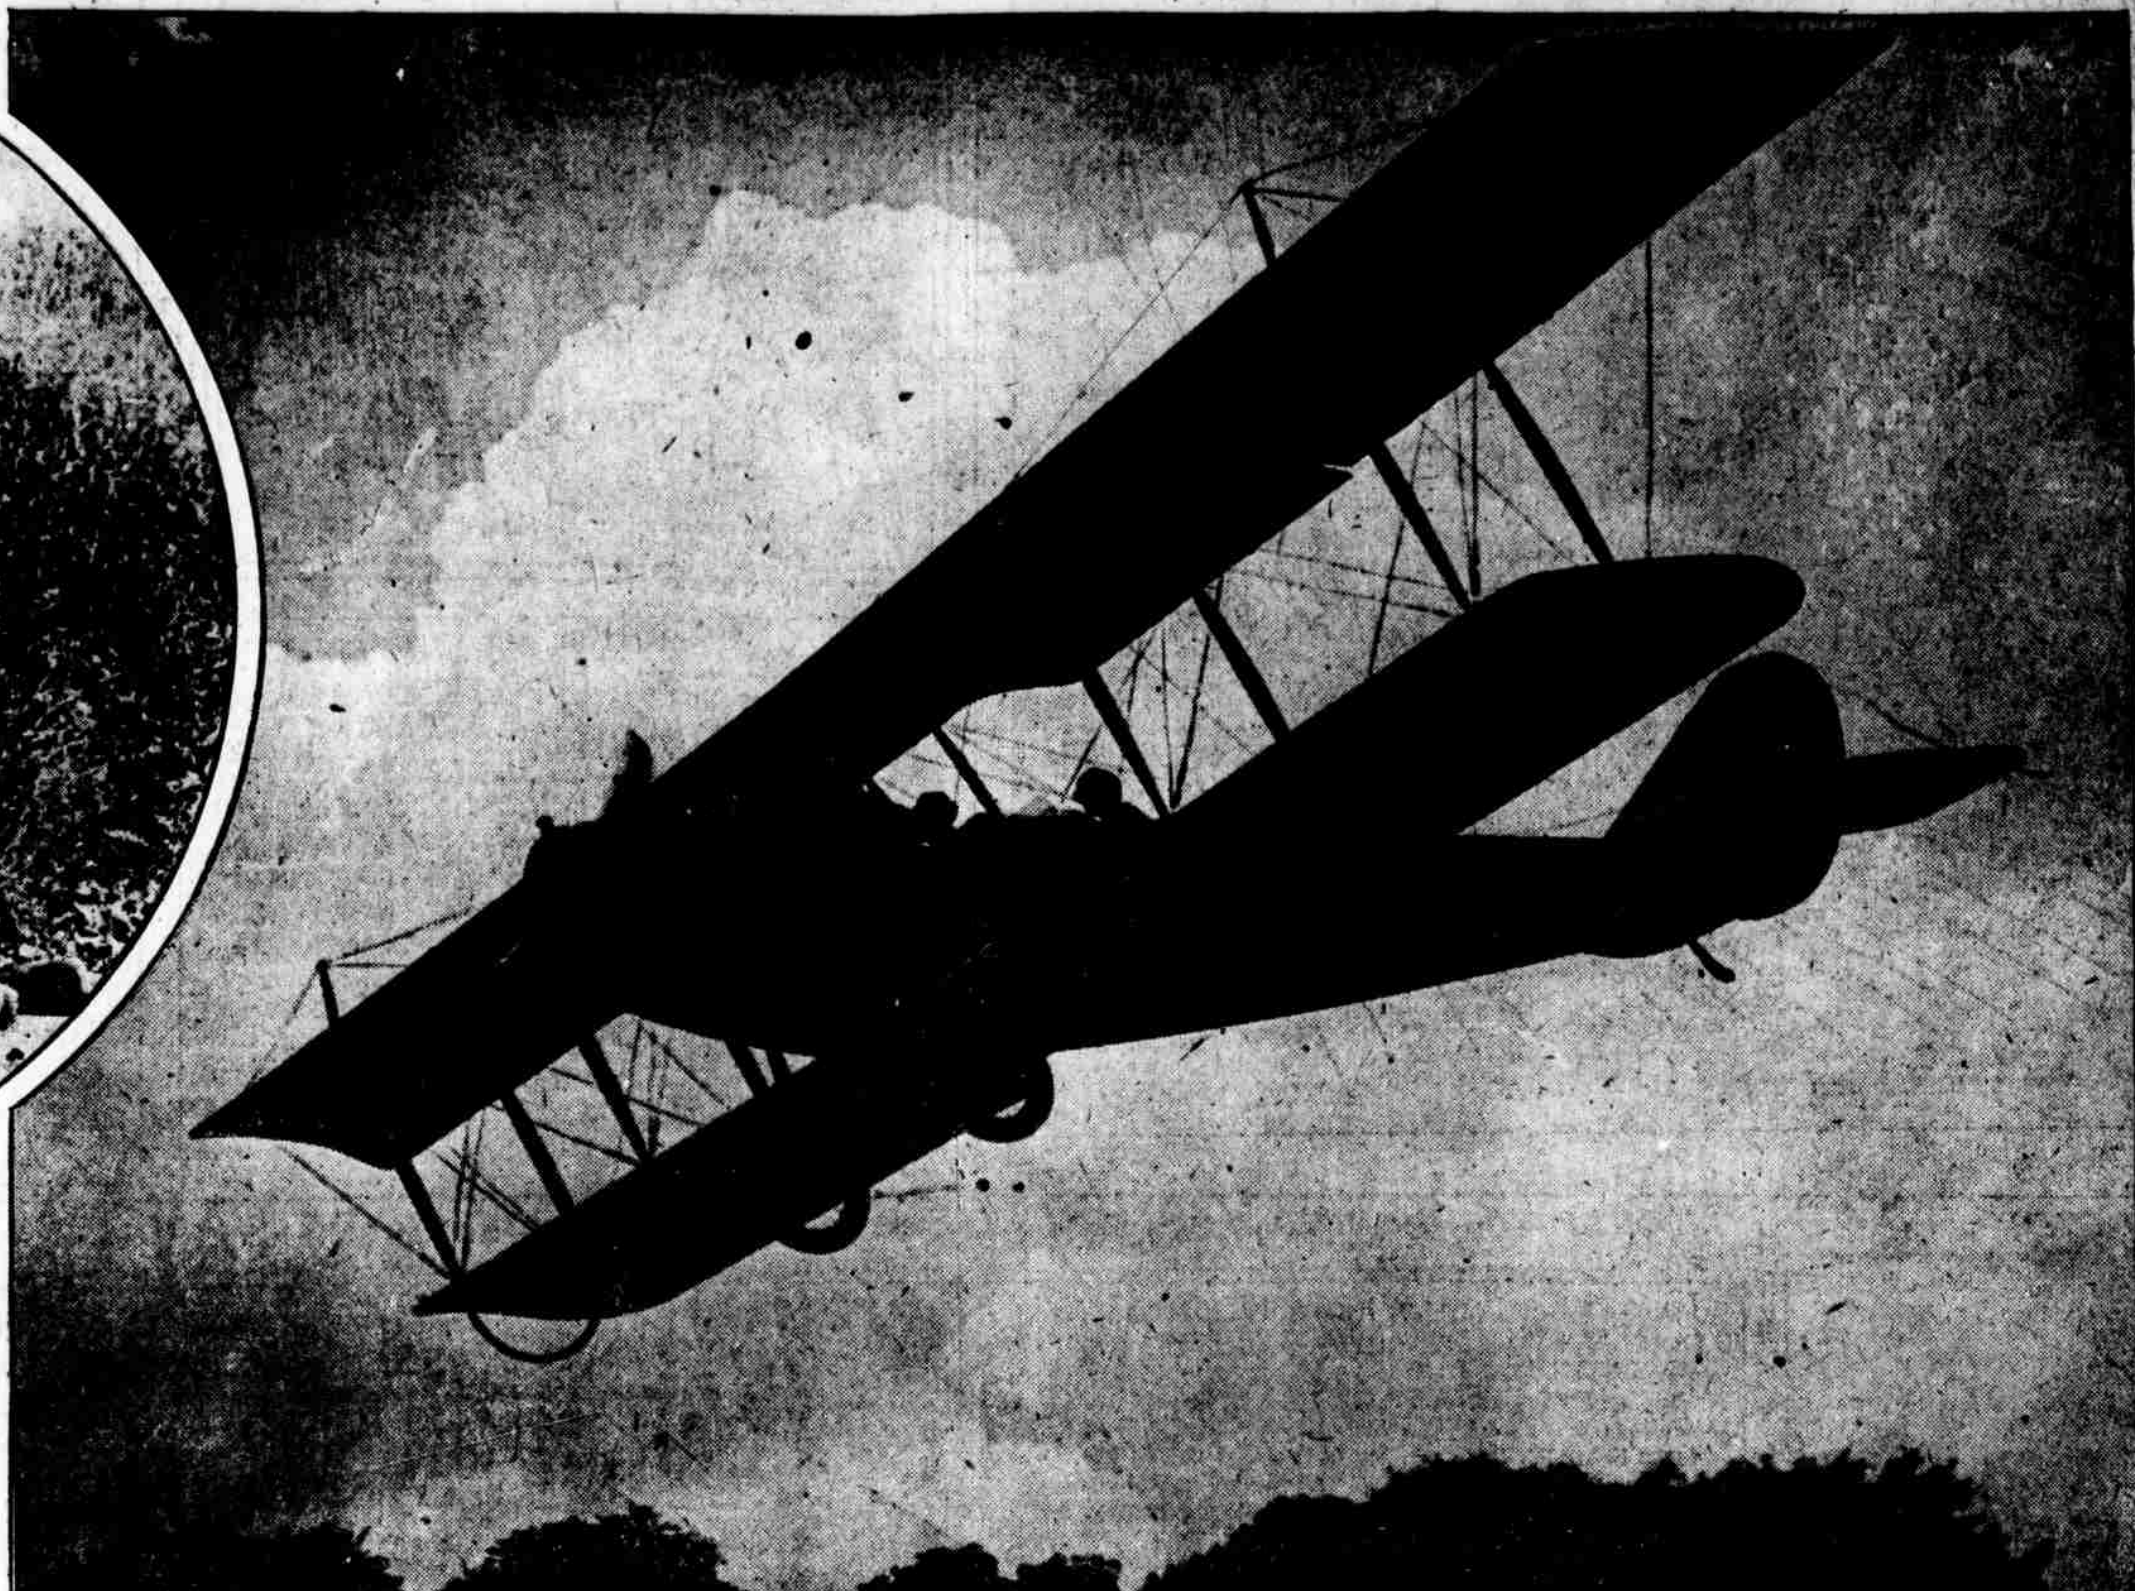

and THE EVENING TELEGRAPH

Philadelphia, Thursday, July 18, 1918

REMARKABLE CLOSE-UP VIEW OF A BATTLEPLANE IN FLIGHT HERE—THE DAY'S NEWS IN PICTURES

A GERMAN SNIPER whose sharpshooting days were ended by a French patrol lies where he fell while the poilus continued their hunt for more of the foe.
Underwood & Underwood

IMAGINE YOURSELF A GERMAN airman with this great battleplane on your trail—one of the seven planes which flew here yesterday from Mineola, N. Y., and landed on Belmont Plateau.

GASSED BY A GERMAN poison wave, this Yankee soldier is glad to find himself in the hands of American doctors at a first-aid tent behind the lines.
Committee on Public Information

AMONG THE FIRST of our soldiers to fall wounded, these American soldiers are nearing the end of their long confinement at a base hospital overseas.
Committee on Public Information

INDICATIVE OF THE "PEP" possessed by the "Tommy Waack" is the determination with which this young woman entered into the war-of-war during field-day work of the British women in France.

WARS MAY COME and wars may go, but the kids' love for watermelon is undying.