HOG ISLAND TO GO ON

Westinghouse Plant Developing Into One of Country's Wonderful Workshops

Philadelphia's future as the industrial center of America has been assimed by

While the casual reader may got the impression that many of the scores of plants that have sprung into being in this city and its vicinity during the last eighteen months are of mushroom growth, meant only to last until the Germans are beaten, the fact is that a imber of the largest will continue to operate indefinitely.

Hog Island, for instance, will keep on making ships for many years after the peace trenty is signed. So will the yards at Bristol, Chester and Wilmington. As for the munitions factories, plans are already prepared for turning those big organizations into constructive channels.

One of the biggest permanent plants in the district will be that of the Westing-house Company, at Essington. There are made the Westinghouse system of marine engines, which can be especially adapted to submarines as well as used on any kind of cargo boat or warship.

These engines are a complete unit, including steam box, turbines, reduction gear case and condensers, and are so occumpact that they weigh much less in proportion to the power produced than other similar machines.

For many years these engines were built at the big Westinghouse plant at East Pittsburgh, but some time ago, before it seemed likely that this country would be drawn into the European maeistrom, it was decided to erect a new plant on the Atlantic coast just to turn out the marine-systems. out the marine systems.

Labor Market Advantage

Philadelphia was picked because of the available supply of skilled labor, the port and railroad facilities and the fact that an adequate size could be purchased at a reasonable price. The location ob-tained is between Lester and Essington and has the Baltimere and Ohio Rail-road on the west and the Banacalesia. road on the west and the Pennsylvania Railroad on the east, with the Delaware only a few yards beyond the Pennsy

At present 4000 workers are employed there. When additions to the plant now under way are completed between 12,000 and 15,000 will be needed, and eventually the company counts on having 30,000 the company counts on naving authors.

The Westinghouse Company, being on the ground early, before the rush to buy Essington sites had started, was able to purchase 500 acres stretching be-tween the Delaware and Darby Creek. One hundred and fen acres are now it

It was planned to start work on the plant in the fall of 1916, but it proved difficult to get machinery, raw ma-terial and labor, because of the great emand from munitions plants and the high wages paid by these "war-bride"

But when the United States entered the war, the Westinghouse people went to the Government, explained what their engine could do, and their claims were promptly indorsed by naval experts, and won the co-operation of Uncle Sam. Ground was broken for the first building of the plant April 1, 1917. This was completed August 15, just four months and a half later. And the building has been built to last. Even a casual glance will prove that to the most skeptical.

The first casting was made November
20 last year, and the first completed engine was turned out and snipped March 23, this year, to one of the sub-marine boat-building firms.

The other building been rushed to completion just as rapidly as was the first one, the internal railroad system put in and the time and labor saving devices, for which this plant is noteworthy, even in this day of effi-cleacy, plus in the operation of all fac-

Emergency Aid Opens Repair Department Monday

A department for repairing and conserving the uniforms and other ciothing of soldiers and sailors will be opened Monday morning by the Emergency Aid of Pennsylvania in Griffith Hall, Crozer Building, 1420 Chestnut street, where a trained woman will be in charge as superintendent of the voluntary work to be done by women who have male relatives or friends in the military service.

This work will run the scale of the mending a mother or wife usually is called upon to do when their men folks are at home. Officers of the Emergency, Aid believe that, because it offers every woman with a male member of her family in the service an opportunity to serve in the cause, this work will especially appeal to them. No volunteers will be asked to give their entire time to it, but whatever time they can spare from their other duties, if that is only a few hours a day.

Soldiers and sailors' clothing needing repair has been gathered from the cantonments and navy yards and brought here. partment · Monday

"I am heartily in accord with the War Industries Board in the attitude it has taken with respect to manufacturers who are constantly trying to outbid each other, and thus are taking workmen away from the shipyards," said Mr. Piez. "In some wessern yards, ordinary mechanics are paid such a high scale of wages, often running to $1.25 an hour, that they are making more than they are that they are making more than the executives of the yards. How About Our Guns?

What are we doing about guns for our men in France? When an American force faces its German foe across that narrow strip of No Man's Land, which has the advantage in weapons? Germany has spent forty years preparing; we've been at it half as many months. Are our guns as good as theirs? Have we enough of them for our khakied millions? Are we producing more guns fast enough to supply the new millions now pouring into camp? The whole amazing story of the arming of America is told, for the first time, in

"Some Gunmen of the U.S.A."

By WILLIAM ATHERTON DU PUY The third in the series of articles "Behind the Scenes

With the War Department' Starting with the declaration of war, this article traces every step in the development of our gun-making program. Rifles, machine guns, field guns, howitzers, naval rifles-all are described, together with their types, how they compare with similar weapons of other armies, how the War Department worked miracles of quantity production to get them

It's a story no American should fail to read. The life of your boy "over there" depends on these guns.
