

Evening Public Ledger

and
THE EVENING TELEGRAPH
Philadelphia, Wednesday, July 31, 1918

APPENINGS IN PHILADELPHIA DOMINATE A PHOTOGRAPHIC REVIEW OF THE DAY'S NEWS EVENTS

RATHER THAN RISK the terrors of further rioting in South Philadelphia, many negro residents of the riot belt have elected to move into more peaceful sections of the city.

UNCLE SAM ASKS YOU to buy more War-Saving Stamps through the medium of Miss Emily Sloss, in her booth, on Chestnut Street. Confidentially, the old familiar figure is impersonated by C. J. Allert, a patriotic Philadelphian.

AN INSPIRING SORT of patriotism is that evidenced by Rabbi Wise, preacher, scholar and author, shown to the left, doing the work of a laborer in a New York shipyard. He does not retain his modest compensation, but gives it to more needy workers. International Film Service.

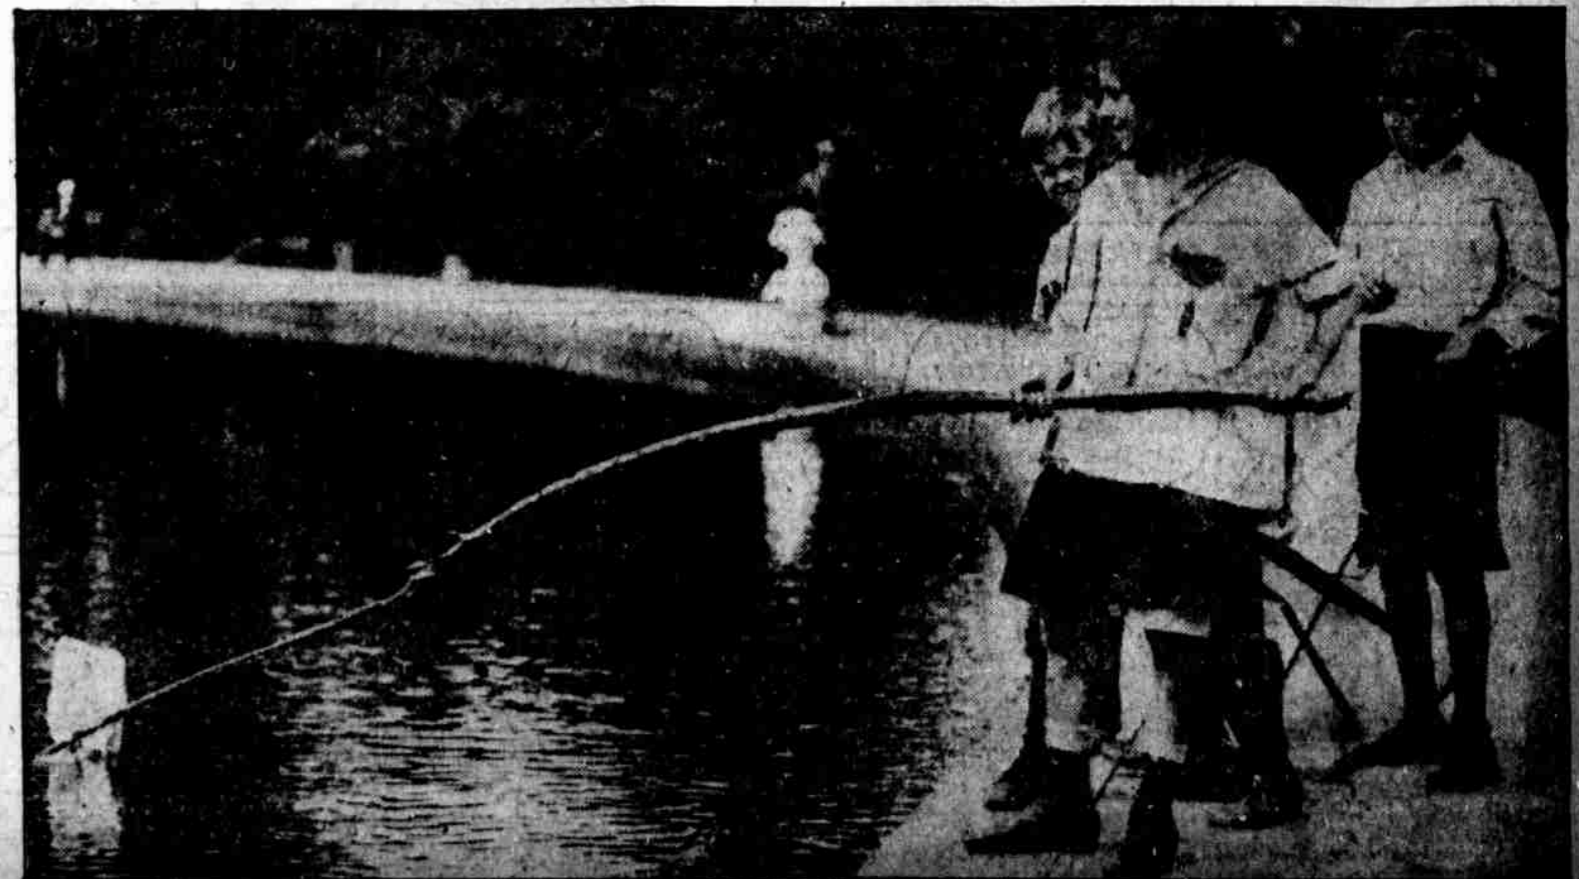

THE ORIENT IS SUGGESTED in the nose veil, now quite the thing in the Occident. It is worn here by Mrs. Walter Lewisohn, who attended the Long Branch Horse Show for the benefit of the Monmouth Memorial Hospital for sick soldiers. International Film Service.

THEY ARE TUNING UP now on Belmont Plateau for the Grand Circuit races the middle of August. Left to right: Ruth K, The Divorcee and Colorado Bell getting into racing trim.

EVERYBODY SEEMS SATISFIED at this bargain struck during the day's buying at the city's great bargain counter at Dock street.

IF THE HEAT BOTHERS YOU, try watching the kiddies in Fairmount Park. And rest assured you will return home refreshed.