

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Is Interested in the Engagement of Miss Rebecca Nevins Patterson and Lieutenant Crockett—Return of Lieutenant Newhall—Mrs. Goodwin's Death

It is interesting to hear of the engagement of Rebecca Patterson, which was announced last week by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Patterson, of Blacksburg, Va., to Lieutenant Joseph McGavock Crockett, now with the Eighth Regiment, F. A. R. D., at Camp Jackson, S. C.

I AM so glad for Mrs. Newhall and the boys that Lieutenant Newhall is to be stationed here for a time. There is so much separation brought about by the war these days among people who care much for each other that it is a happiness to hear of the return, even for a time, of some one from "over there" to his family.

ABOUT the only entertainments you hear of in town nowadays are the ones given for the soldiers and sailors or the ones given by the people who have to be at home because they are working in war occupations, and they certainly do need and deserve the relaxation. And so every Thursday night the employees of the Emergency Fleet Corporation who live at the Community House at Forty-first and Chestnut streets give a "social" consisting of dancing, music and singing.

BRITONS WELCOME YANKEES U. S. Soldiers Warmly Greeted in England. Writes Jack Coombe. Old Britain is giving our boys in khaki notable receptions and extending a welcome that is not a bit less enthusiastic than that accorded to them when they passed in review before loving friends and relatives in their home cities.

BENEFIT FOR WAR AMBULANCE Garden Reading to Be Given in Glen Cove, L. I., on Saturday. Glen Cove, L. I., Aug. 5. There will be a garden reading by Miss Jane Manner for the benefit of a war ambulance under the auspices of the City Club of Glen Cove, L. I., on the afternoon of August 16. It will be given on the lawn at the residence of Mrs. L. A. Thompson.

COUSIN JOHN had arrived from Harrisburg to pay a visit. The family hadn't seen Cousin John for a long time and they were discovering that he knew a great many of their friends out there. So all the grown-ups sat around and wanted to know all the news about him.

Social Activities An interesting engagement announced today is that of Miss Josephine Dodge, daughter of Mrs. James Mages Dodge of McKean avenue, Germantown, and Mr. Joseph S. Lovering Wharton, Jr., U. S. N. R. F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Lovering Wharton of Oak Lane. Miss Dodge is spending the summer with her mother in Jenkintown, R. I.

Mrs. Henry Middleton Fisher, of Alverthorpe, has returned after spending two weeks in Portland, Me.

Miss Mary Lippincott, of Rabbit Hill, Wyncoke, has returned after spending two weeks in Philadelphia.

Mrs. George Scattergood is spending a few weeks at Rockaway Beach, L. I., where Mr. Scattergood is stationed in the aviation camp.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Agnes Christian, daughter of Mrs. S. Hamilton Christian and Corporal Albert Stephenson Hutt, United States signal battalion, took place on Tuesday, July 30, in Old Swedes Church, Wilmington. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Bell, vicar of the church. The bride and bridegroom were attended by the bride's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Callaway, of Wilmington. Corporal Hutt is stationed at Camp Wheeler, Ga.

Mrs. and Mrs. Nathan Oestreicher, of 5215 Spruce street, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary on Friday.

Dr. Joseph D. Seiberling, of 1805 Arch street, has received a commission as first lieutenant in the United States medical corps and left Friday evening for Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

Miss Sara Miltenberger, of 2555 North Twenty-first street, entertained informally on Friday evening. Her guests were Miss Helen Chatham, Miss Emma Clower, Miss Ruth Gordon, Mr. Edward Clymer, U. S. N.; Mr. Milton Durand, U. S. N.; Mr. Frank Evans, U. S. N., and Mr. Raymond Matthews.

GRACEFUL TRIBUTE TO YOUTHFUL HERO

Headmaster of the Groton School Eulogizes the Memory of Quentin Roosevelt

By ENDICOTT PEABODY. Headmaster of the Groton School. The grief of those who knew and loved Quentin Roosevelt has been increased by a two-fold disappointment.

For three days we have been amazed by the hope which we gained from messages coming from both France and Spain that he had come down within the lines of the enemy and had been taken prisoner. Notice dropped from German airplanes have dispelled the hope. The boy certainly is dead.

The second disappointment comes from the thought of what he might have done for his country had he survived the war.

The Saturday evening when the fact of his death has just been established, we find ourselves in the mood of the two young men walking to Emmaus, talking of their friend who had been taken away from them.

Prevented from taking a prominent part in politics, he was an injury to the world. He was a young man of whom we had seen the latent powers of his youth which were so full of promise of high service to the nation.

He was an eager and intelligent reader, familiar with many branches of literature. When he was assigned to bed, as he had to be occasionally on account of his back, he would appear at the infirmary with an armful of books—standard works, or the writings of the real authors of the day.

The power of concentration, a faculty possessed by many members of the Roosevelt family, which accounts for their enthusiasm and ability to do things—was highly developed in Quentin. He took much interest in printing and spent many hours in the school press.

When he was assigned to bed, as he had to be occasionally on account of his back, he would appear at the infirmary with an armful of books—standard works, or the writings of the real authors of the day.

Socially he was a most agreeable companion for persons of all ages, for he had been much with his contemporaries. His sense of humor was keen and unfailing, and always of a kindly nature. He was naturally an actor, and had been in many plays and all kinds of things.

He was a friend who did not forget. With these powers of body, mind and spirit it is not strange that he should have been so successful in the summer school as a man of intense concentration can learn, his time of training was brief and he was sent across the sea in the early summer of 1917.

It is a striking instance, this of the difference between the two systems involved in the struggle for the survival of the fittest. They are the products respectively of an autocracy and a republic.

It is natural that there should be just the kind of differences in our social and economic life that we have made evident today. They are the products respectively of an autocracy and a republic.

With us, the sons of one who has held the highest office in the gift of the people come forward promptly, eager to take their part in the service of the nation.
