the sentence. She left immediately for her home.

Miss Duke said she had worn at New London a suit of the New Jersey Home Guard, but had attached to the collar of the coat the United States buttons prescribed for soldiers only. She disclaimed any intention of posing as an officer and said she donned the military garb as a vacation lark.

Emory Titman, who holds the distinction of being the biggest baseball fan in the United States, was held in $200 bail for another hearing September 5 by Magistrate McCleary today. Titman is charged with grand larceny by a resident of New York who wants him extradited to the Empire State.

He is accused of having given worthless checks, whose total valued aggregated $8200. The checks are said to have been given by Titman to square a gambling debt and afterward payment on them was stopped.

A civil action was started and later the warrant charging grand larceny was issued. Several attempts to hold a hearing in the case have always resulted.

Outnumbered by the enemy five to one and compelled to meet his attack at the end of the worst all-night born-bardment of the war. American troops, which helped break up the recent Ger-man drive along the Marne, inflicted such terrible losses on the Germans with rife fire and machine guns that those who survived broke and ran for cover and the battle was lost to them. The first intimate and graphic story of the bitterest fighting of the whole of the bitterest fighling of the whole conflict to reach this city, arrived yes-terday in a letter from Private Pau-Lamorelle, Jr., of St. Davids, Pa., sor of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lamorelle, of that place and penhage of Judge Lamorelle place, and nephew of Judge Lam of the Orphans' Court. Serving as a gunner in the 117th trench motor but-tery, Rainbow division, he passed brough the worst of it.
