The cotton market showed a steady tone today, and although substantial advances were recorded at one time, most of the gain was lost before the end, due to reports of rain in the southwest. There appeared to be a general tendency around the ring among traders to take part in the market to a moderate extent, only until after the next Government crop report is published. The excitement and activity of the early trading was followed by a quieter and more orderly market, with prices sagging off some 15 to 20 points from the best under realizing. If was felt that the continued favorable war news and the failure of southwestern weather conditions to show any improvement had been factors on the early advance, but the bulge was generally attributed more to technical conditions than to the influence of any fresh feature. The lower opening here probably explained part of the Liverpool buying. After sagging off from 31.55 to 31.55 for January, the market held steady, with little pressure in evidence.
