FREIGHTER WHIPS SUPER SUBMARINE

Injured Seaman Brought Here Tells Story of 3-Hour Fight

U-BOAT PROBABLY SUNK

Italian Steamer Damaged and Five of Crew Received Wounds

Five sailors of an Italian cargo ship were injured by an explosion that followed a battle off the New England coast with a German submarine...

That was the proud assertion today of officers and members of the crew.

The ship, attacked off the New England coast, made a gallant stand against the U-boat and after three hours of desperate fighting made its escape...

Shell Shatters Plates. It penetrated the steel plates of the freighter and exploded.

The injured sailor in the hospital is Rene Albano, who was making his first trip to America. He received severe wounds in his right thigh, but will recover.

Details of the battle between the big freighter and the submarine were today given to naval officials by the ship's captain and crew.

On Tuesday when the freighter was skirting the New England shore, a German submarine came to the surface. "It was a matter of minutes for a submarine," said one of the freighter's officers, "and before we could get our guns into action the German commander opened fire."

Two Heavy Guns. His crew operated two guns of heavy caliber, one forward and one aft.

"We tried to escape, but it took more than three hours to shake off the fighting sea-rat. The German clung hard, but, fortunately, we escaped him. More than 200 shots were fired, and our gunfire was so accurate that he must have been damaged. When the German ceased firing, we were confident that one of our shells had inflicted a death wound, but we did not stop to investigate, for it does not pay to take chances with Fritz."

"During the engagement flying splinters, bits of iron and shell fragments were scattered over the ship, and many of our crew sustained injuries. It is believed that the submarine in this battle was the one that had been operating on the Grand Banks."

TRUCK WRECKS BUILDING

Family Narrowly Escape Death in West Girard Avenue

Several persons narrowly escaped death today when a motor truck, going at a rapid rate, crashed into the printing establishment and home of Edwin R. Pancoast, 428 West Girard avenue, and wrecked the building.

Grinding his way through dust and debris, Pancoast ran to the second floor of the building and called his wife and baby to the street. While he was rescuing them, a policeman went to the third floor and carried Pancoast's mother, Mrs. Amelia Pancoast, who was seriously ill, safely from the building.

When the crash was inevitable the driver of the truck saved his life by jumping to the street.

The truck belonged to the Lincoln Furniture Company. It was going east in Girard avenue on Fifth street at Lawrence street the driver attempted to make a quick turn and the crash followed.

AGENT CAN'T BUY LICENSES TO WED

"No Publicity" Notaries Arouse Ire of Register Sheehan

CHARGE BIG FEES

"Broker" Agrees to Get Permit and "Keep Names Out of Newspapers"

Register of Wills James B. Sheehan has declared war against certain notaries public who advertise they can obtain marriage licenses "without publicity" for clients.

One of the license brokers this afternoon offered to procure a marriage license for $8 and guaranteed that the issuance of the license would not be published.

Register Sheehan as chief clerk of the Orphans' Court, has general charge of the Marriage License Bureau. Licenses are issued on order for the issuance of marriage licenses to notaries public on behalf of clients. Despite that prohibition some "brokers" are willing to pay the fee to obtain the license without publicity.

Turn to Delaware County

Some of the notaries, alarmed at the Register's declaration against exorbitant fees, have turned their attention to Delaware County to reap a harvest from the uninformed. The attention of the county clerk of Delaware County, at Media, has been called to the practice.

Notaries, it is said, have no legal right to obtain licenses in Delaware County unless the parties intend to have the ceremony performed in that county.

Mr. Sheehan pointed out that marriage licenses may be obtained without any inconvenience at Room 413, City Hall. The legal fee is $1. But no one, he said, can lawfully guarantee that the issuance of the license will not be published in the newspapers. An act of Assembly requires that they be made public.

The list of licenses issued each day is prepared for the newspapers of this city by a court news association which dispatches a copy of the list to each newspaper subscribing for the service. Officials of the court news association say no one has any legal right to assert that certain names may be deleted from these lists.

He added the Americans will not be propagandists. It may be said that there is general agreement here with the statement of General March that the war will end next year, provided America puts its whole soul into the task and accomplishes the ambitious war power schedule already projected.

GERMANTOWN HOSPITAL AIDED. A request of $15,000 in the will of Helen M. Hathaway.

Mr. Lewis was asked if his prospective client should bring a "gift" to him to be given to the newspaper men "covering" the marriage license bureau.

He said all that would be necessary for his prospective client would be to call with the prospective bride at his office in the Commercial Trust Building.

It would not be necessary for the applicants to visit the license bureau in person. If application was made before 4 o'clock in the afternoon, he said, the license could be delivered to the applicant at 4 o'clock the same day.

FINED BAKERS ARE WARNED

Told Not to Go to Other Shops for Trade Supplies

The fact that certain bakers throughout the State who have been ordered to close their establishments for defined periods for violations of the baking regulations have purchased bread from other bakers and distributed it among their customers has led to this statement by Howard Heinz, Federal food administrator for Pennsylvania.

"When a baker is ordered to close he must discontinue business entirely, both in respect to distribution of bread and not reopen either branch of his business until after the termination of the period for which he has been closed."

"Violation of the order will result in a considerable extension of the period for which the baker has been closed, if not in revocation of his license for the term of the war."

TROUSERED ELEVATOR GIRLS IN HOSTELRY STILL FEMININE

Designer of Walton Operators' Costumes Wanted to Satisfy Fair Sex's Love of Adornment—Crowds Look Them Over

DESPIITE their entrance into "man-nish" industry, women still are and always will be feminine enough to be attracted most to labors where becoming costumes can be worn. With this belief in mind, Mrs. Charlotte Hale, of Boston, designed the attractive costumes which were today adopted by the seven elevator girls at the Hotel Walton.

There were some people, of course, who really had to go up in those elevators, but there were dozens of others who rang the bell just to see the "trouserette" girls. Nevertheless, Eugene G. Miller, manager, is delighted with the uniform, which hereafter is to be a part of the hotel livery.

Of a soft, golden brown wool, resembling serge, the bloomer carb is designed strictly for feminine wearers. It is braided, yes, but not like men's uniforms.

"I tried to avoid mannishness in every way," explained Mrs. Hale, "and at the same time to design something practical and serviceable. You see the trousers with their close-fitting cuffs about the ankle, are long enough to allow the girls to wear half hose. The loosely fitting cotton jacket and the V-necked vest are designed to give ample room for free movements of the arms and to allow the girl to go corsetless if she likes. The stiff collar across the back of the neck and the brass buttons give the costume just enough of the military air to remind folk that war has called these women into service."

"I believe pretty costumes will stimulate the recruiting of women into war industries more than anything," declared Mrs. Hale. "And to my mind there is no need for a woman to don a door apron, aprons were substituted for her feelings and eventually to her efficiency. These costumes are designed as safe and sane. There are no fluffs to catch on the machinery. There are no needless frills, but they are just as attractive as the frills she is accustomed to wear in her home."

Manager Miller said if women pages and door attendants were substituted later, they, too, would wear the new livery.

MASONIC AID FOR ONLY NO SAFETY ANYWHERE U. S. APPROVED PEACE WITHIN BOCHE RANGE

Fraternity Spurns Idea of Assisting Peace Move of German Masonry. By the United Press. Washington, Aug. 22. American Masonic leaders today spurned the idea that Masonry in this country will lend itself to what is being called the full approval of the Government of the United States.

The true Free Masons of the United States do not desire to aid in bringing about any kind of peace except such as one as shall meet the full approval of the Government of the United States, said George F. Moore, sovereign grand commander of the supreme council, southern jurisdiction Scottish Rite Masons.

He added the Americans will not be propagandists. It may be said that there is general agreement here with the statement of General March that the war will end next year, provided America puts its whole soul into the task and accomplishes the ambitious war power schedule already projected.

FOOD PRICES CUT AT CURB MARKET

Crowd at Opening of City's First Establishment of Kind ON COLLEGE AVENUE

Housewives Save Money by Curb Market Buying

Some of the prices today at the curb market, compared with those quoted in the retail stores:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Price. Green peppers (doz) 10c, Peaches $1-$1.25, Apples (small sweet) 50c, Maiden Blush apples 70c, Tomatoes 60c.

Prices for peaches, apples and tomatoes are for five-eighths of a bushel, as against half-bushel baskets used in the stores.

Not only baskets, but children's wagons, baby carriages, four sacks, automobiles, suitcases, and when all these failed, aprons and hats were brought into use by the thousands of householders who today patronized Philadelphia's first official "curb market" on College avenue west of Ridge avenue.

Big, luscious tomatoes, apples of many varieties, peaches, pears, white potatoes, peppers, lettuce, cucumbers, sweet corn, eggplant, beets, parsnips, cantaloupes and parsley—all fresh and tempting—were included in the array. Long before 7 o'clock the farmers' wagons full of vegetables and fruits had ranged themselves about the curb, and almost that early the patrons began to file across the square with baskets and bags.

Before 9 o'clock the supplies of sweetcorn and green vegetables were exhausted, though the fruits, tomatoes and cantaloupes were bartered throughout most of the day.

Market is Success. In the opinion of the food inspectors and members of the local food administration, the first curb market to be established in a city of the first class in a decade was a success.

Established under the supervision of the federal food administration and city authorities to eliminate the middle man and thus give the consumers vegetables and fruits fresh from the country at lower prices than the corner grocer charges, the market today proved its worth.

A pretty young matron exhibited a beaming basket of bright red apples as she explained she had paid only 50 cents for them.

"I've bought here for two years and I like it," she said. "You don't have to worry about how long they have stood in the basket or shop. Just look in there"—and she pointed to her neighbor's basket heaped with glossy green peppers.

"Aren't they fine? She paid ten cents a dozen for them, and you pay at least twice that downtown. Tomatoes at the curb are sixty cents a half-bushel basket. Here they are sixty cents for five-eighths bushel—a quarter of a bushel more than you get downtown. And these are much larger and better tomatoes than I have been able to get elsewhere."

Market Much Larger. Peaches and pears, like the tomatoes, sold for about the same price per basket as those in the stores, but the market baskets were much larger. "Already a number of requests have been received for the establishment of curb markets at other points in the city," said Food Administrator Cooke. "The food administration is just as eager to establish them as the people are to have them, and they will be put into running order just as soon as we find the desire for them is genuine. The market will be kept clean and in good condition, and the produce will be inspected by the official food inspectors so that patrons may know they are receiving the best possible."
