for I've been doing pretty decent lately. Only list week Goldman told me that if I kept on he I was going I'd make a real insurance man some day.

As soon as I got into his office I saw Goldman and—dad. I could see at once that dad was upset, but, of course, I didn't know what it was about. Goldman came in and said, "Flint, your father wants to have a talk with you, and I have told him that you can use this office without interference."

Told her, "said dad, "that it would spot you."

"My God!" I reared. "That's more than you or any many have any right to say." I clenched my flat and was hurled against the curbstone and about to hit dad when the door opened, and Goldman came in and said, "Flint, your father wants to have a talk with you, and I have told him that you can use this office without interference."
