STORE-DOOR DELIVERY TO END FREIGHT JAM

Consignee Must Remove Goods From Station Within 24 Hours of Notice

Saving of time and prevention of terminal congestion are assured, experts of the Chamber of Commerce declare, by the new "store-door" system of freight delivery, soon to be inaugurated by the Federal railroad administration.

Under the proposed plan consignees will be given twenty-four hours in which to remove freight shipments. If they fail to do so within that time the freight will be loaded on trucks, sent to the consignee's address and dumped on the sidewalk. He must pay the truckman, and, in addition, the police will see to it that he promptly removes the goods.

This scheme is a step in advance of a ruling put into effect early in the summer by which consignees were given telephone notice of the arrival of a shipment and allowed forty-eight hours in which to remove the goods. At the end of that time the consignment was sent to the man or firm to whom it was addressed and the latter paid the truck cost.

Before this country entered the war custom decreed that a consignee should be given written notice of the arrival of a shipment. Then he was allowed to take his own time to send for the freight. Sometimes five or six days elapsed before he did so. The first step to remedy this condition was the substitution of telephone instead of mailed notices. Next came the forty-eight-hour time-limit, and now a twenty-four-hour limit is in sight.

REA'S YACHT FIXINGS BURNED

Costly furnishings of other ships destroyed in Brooklyn
Costly woodwork and furnishings removed from seized German liners and from private yachts loaned to the Government, including the yacht of Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania Hall, were destroyed last night in a fire that swept a six-story building in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Rea loaned his yacht, the Monolou, to the Navy Department. As were other vessels, the Monolou, in being prepared for war service, was stripped of valuable woodwork and costly furnishings which were stored in the Brooklyn building. The Monolou went into service commanded by President Rea's son, Henry C. Rea, of the naval reserves.

Among the fixtures destroyed were those from the following yachts: J. P. Morgan's Corsair, Howard Gould's Niagara and Henry Ford's Sialia. Valuable paintings from the saloons of the Vaterland, now the Leithan, and the famous grand staircase from the same liner, as well as paintings, fixtures and other articles from the President Lincoln, the George Washington and the Kronprinz Wilhelm, also were ruined.

FUEL—WHY WASTED!
By adopting Smart's Patented Heating System you can save half the coal. One pound of coal is burned in a fire and the waste is in front of the fire box makes its own gas and burns it, thus heating three ways—NO WASTE!

BREWERS HERE SEEK TO AVOID SHUT-DOWN

Means of Dodging Order to Be Discussed at Meeting This Week

Plans to have the food administration's brewery-closing order, which becomes effective December 1, rescinded or modified will be made when the members of the Philadelphia Lager Beer Brewers' Association meet here this week.

Edward A. Schmidt, president of the association, who has been out of the city, is expected to return today and issue a call for the meeting.

Many saloons in the city may be forced to close a few days after the breweries cease operations because of a shortage of beer. Saloons that would be thus affected are those where beer and light lunches are served principally.

It is said an effort will be made to have the limitation orders, both as to beer, the use of which was cut down to 50 per cent of normal recently, and production, lifted between now and December 1. This, it is said, would permit the brewers to use up nearly all the grain on hand.

HUNTS HOUSE BY CIRCULARS

Desperate Flat-Dweller Sends Form Letters Broadcast

Tired of fruitless house-hunting, Julius C. Oswald, Forty-fifth street and Springfield avenue, has put his friends and neighbors and many persons he does not know to work helping in the search. The Oswald family now lives on the third floor of a store building, and it is not known how long the search will last.

My thoughts in circulating these few requests, the letter says, "was that possibly you would know of one of these houses being vacated soon or that you might be in a position to help in the search for one somewhere nearby, and that you would be kind enough to get into communication with me."

Lt. Harold D. Speakman "Met Measure of a Man"

He "met the measure of a man." This eulogy of Lieutenant Harold D. Speakman, Narberth, Pa., unofficially reported killed in action, is in a letter written his family by Sergeant Charles J. Zigner, Company L, 112th Infantry.

While, according to the letter, Lieutenant Speakman met death the last of July, no word has been received from the War Department. Friends still hope he may be living.

"I spoke to him the day he met his death," wrote Sergeant Zigner, "and his cheerful conversation still holds a sweet place in my memory, and that pleasant good-by and handshake just a few hours before it all happened will ever abide with me."

COOL, BUT IT ISN'T SO BAD

So Says the Weather Man, Who Predicts Warm Change

This weather "isn't so bad"—that is, it isn't unusually cool for this time of the year, according to the local weather bureau.

Philadelphia was shivered under heavy blankets last night and thought all cool-weather records for September had been broken were this enlightened by the weather man today.

WAR DELAYS OPENING OF OYSTER SALOONS

Causes Scarcity of Dredgers at Beds and Openers at City Bars

The oyster and the world war have collided, with disastrous consequences for the oyster.

Twenty or more oyster "saloons" in this city are delaying their usual fall opening this year. "Scarcity of oysters and of help" is their explanation. From time immemorial, September, a month with an "R," has been synonymous with the debut of the bivalve season.

having difficulties with help. Heretofore, the white-aproned servitors who bawled out "fry a half" were content with wages of from $10 to $15 a week. Tips added considerably to that amount. But now they want $18 and $20 a week and a mere "jitney" tip is unappreciated.

Wholesale dealers in oysters deny there is a scarcity but admit they are not as plentiful as in the past. And they have to charge retailers more.

E. P. Timmons, one of the largest wholesale dealers in the city, estimated today that in normal times Philadelphia consumed about 5000 bags of oysters weekly. As each bag contains 900 oysters, the modest total is 4,500,000 oysters or 375,000 dozen.

Culls, or medium-sized oysters, now are bringing $8.50 a thousand wholesale. Primes, or large oysters, cost from $10 to $11 a thousand wholesale. At this time last year the culls could be sold at wholesale for $5.50 a thousand, although the primes commanded substantially the same price as they do now.

"Even the oyster gatherers are having their troubles with help," explained Mr. Timmons today. "Formerly they could get men to grapple for oysters at from $35 to $40 a month. Now they must pay $50 a month and use older men at that. Oyster grappling is a job for a young man. But the young men fail for the lure of the shipyard and the munition plant—that is those who haven't entered the service."
