

ELEVATOR RULES TO BE MODIFIED

Part of New Coal and Power Plan to Avert Shut-down of Industries

MAY USE N. Y. CURRENT

Fuel Administration Tells of Coming Change in Reply to Critics

New measures of distribution of electric energy, as well as coal, to industries of this city and State will be instituted shortly, according to announcement today by E. L. Cole, director of conservation of the State fuel administration.

Adoption of these measures is the only way in which continued employment of wage earners can be assured, Mr. Cole said.

He also announced that the present restrictions on elevator service in large buildings are to be modified somewhat, and that when legislation pending in Congress is enacted New York's surplus power, amounting to 200 kilowatts, will be diverted to industries of this district.

The fuel conservation director made the announcements while a committee of claims directed at the fuel conservation measures of this State.

Big Power Shortage Here

It was charged by the critics that the measures here are more stringent than in other cities and States. Mr. Cole said that the measures here are necessary because this city's production of war essentials has increased more than any other city in the country. Already, he said, there is a shortage in power of 120,000 kilowatts.

Installation of machinery is now going on and this deficiency in power will be overcome, he said.

In the meantime, Mr. Cole continued, "in order to make possible the selling of war contracts awarded several months ago, this administration, at the request of other departments of the Government, is endeavoring so to distribute the consumption of electric energy, as well as coal, by such measures as will later be instituted.

These measures will largely affect the industrial circles of this city and State.

"In no other way can the disemployment of wage earners be averted."

To Change Elevator Rules

Regarding the modification of elevator restrictions, Mr. Cole said it is proposed to remove the time limits on day operations whereby it is necessary for a car to carry a certain percentage of its capacity before moving. Where there are four or more elevators in a building, one will be kept out of service, instead of the previous rule which kept one car in every five shut down.

In announcing the plan to use New York's surplus power here, Mr. Cole said many of the fuel administration's critics had alleged New York's fuel conservation measures were extremely light in comparison with the measures enforced here. This is due to the fact that New York's war work has not been increased, he said, and that city, therefore, is not gripped by the same shortage of coal.

Mr. Cole declined to state what new measures of distribution are planned for this State.

Two Weeks' Supply for Clubs

Clubs in the city are not to receive more than sufficient coal to last for two weeks ahead, and stores, where part of the building is occupied by the storekeeper's family, are to be considered as private residences, according to new rules issued by the fuel administration for the guidance of coal dealers.

Stores where the owner does not occupy part of the building as a residence are not to receive more than enough coal to last a month, according to the new rules.

Persons who have ordered their winter's supply of coal and have already received two-thirds of what they ordered will not receive the remainder until after January 1, 1919, except in the case of hospitals, orphan asylums, homes for the aged and institutions for like purposes, the fuel administration announces.

FIVE-CENT CARFARE STANDS

No Increase Till Next Year, Mitten Says

There will be no trolley fare increase in this city until after January 1, 1919, President Thomas E. Mitten, of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, made this announcement in a letter to the State Public Service Commission, urging its ratification by the board of the pending contract between the city and the company.

Establishment of a zone system, whereby "long-haul" passengers will be compelled to pay an increased fare, will be substituted for the general fare increase if the Public Service Commission fails to ratify the contract, Mr. Mitten said.

The basic fare of five cents for "short-haul" patrons will be continued. Financial assistance by the Federal Government in the matter of increased facilities to shynappers and munitions plants is the prime factor in the company's ability to continue the five-cent fare, according to Mr. Mitten.
