WRITING letters to the soldier has W grown to be a national pastime. There is scarcely one who does not withdraw from the family circle of Sunday afternoon or night to be all by herself when she weighs those thoughts to send to the camp or the trench Very often the soldier is just a mere acquaintance. But with memo-ries of the long days when a boy may want for mail a girl or an older writes to him as faithfully as though he were a man most dear to

This letter to the acquaintance far This letter to the acquaintance far away has set more than one to chew-ing her pen. Unconsciously one lays down rules. The letter must be newsy, yes, and tell of things that are roing on at home, but the picture of fayety must not be painted too bright. A man likes to know that America is carrying on and abhors a weepy, low-optried letter. But it isn't much fun to hear that the boys gave the gurs a shenle hast Saturday and everybody. had a perfectly wonderful time. At least, it isn't so entertaining when you know you yourself spent that particuknow you yourself spent that particular Saturday crossing No Man's Land It would be lots nicer to have an ac-count of that picnic with a string tied to it, and the string would be that you were missed-dreadfully.

THE letter to the front must be L cheerful, of course, but there are ways and ways of being cheerful. If your pages are so utterly buoyant that your pages are so utterly buoyant that they give the impression the writer regards the war as a mere side issue and that life, as usual, and as gayb as usual, is the rule here in America, the letter of cheer misses its point. The letter of cheer misses its point. Don't give the boys that impression. Let them know that we over here are living the side issue existence, that we over here are hanging breathlessly on the things they are doing over there. That is one of the finest ways to be cheered to exit in the glorious thing

That is one of the finest ways to be cheerful—to exult in the glorious thing about their part in the war that drives the books to the biues and distraction. They don't more about if and they like others to. "Entertainments of all sorts are being fiven in our town to raise money for Red Cross work." writes a reader in Pictorial Review, "but I do not think anything has been more successful finan-cially or socially than the progressive ovelty party that some of us gave in the Red Cross workrooms We wanted to get away from bridge and 500 and euchre and give those people who did not play cards a chance. So we arranged this novelty party with ten tables, at each of which a different menor contest was played. The winner of each contest was awarded one point

STRAWBERRY JAM

Here's a Jar of It Discovered. Some Little Discs for the Telephone

MAYBE I'm peculiar, but if I call on a friend for an afternoon chat I always have a much better time if she has something to eat. And by the same token I should feel that I had not fulfilled my duties as a hostess if I didn't have at least a cup of tea for any guest. But the strawberry conserve I discovered today is a real treat for any time, whether it be with afternoon tea or for luncheon or dinner. The best way to describe it is by saving it tastes just the way you always have thought preserved strawberries ought to taste. You can purchase a jar for thirty-five cents and I'll wager that the man of the house will be forced to admit that it far excels anything that mother at her best used to make.

Somehow, every time I look in our telephone I feel like crossing my fingers. It's such a lovely place for all sorts mischievous germs to collect and,
