

JOHN IRELAND'S LONG LIFE ENDS

Venerable Archbishop of St. Paul Dies

SERVED NATION IN WAR

Militant Churchman and Patriot Was Frequently Suggested for Cardinalate

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 25.—Archbishop John Ireland, of the St. Paul diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, died at 3:55 o'clock today, after a long illness of heart disease and stomach trouble.

Archbishop Ireland recently celebrated his eightieth birthday. Shortly afterward he suffered a second relapse within six months, and his condition became grave.

Death came quietly. A score of prominent Catholic clergymen were at the bedside.

For three days, Archbishop Ireland's physicians had kept their patient alive by the use of oxygen. Late last night the final release came and in the living room where priests and nuns softly chanted prayers for the dying, the end came without a perceptible sign.

The Archbishop's sister, Mother Superior Seraphine, Sister Rose, Father Thomas A. Welch, the Archbishop's secretary, Vice General J. C. Byrne and Bishop Joseph Burch, of St. Cloud, were kneeling beside the bed. The prelate's sister had been in almost constant attendance for more than seventy-two hours.

Despite his years and his weakened condition, the physical resistance of the archbishop amazed his physicians. Last April after he returned from Florida where he spent the winter, he became gravely ill. His life was despaired of, but he rallied, continuing in frail health however, until about two weeks ago.

Last Thursday his physicians announced that his condition had reached a critical stage. Since then their bedtides were practically the same. The end always seemed a few hours away.

Members of the archbishop's household said arrangements for the funeral would be completed until word was received from a member of church dignitaries who attended the funeral of Cardinal John M. Farley in New York yesterday.

"With the voice and spirit of America there will go a wide sphere in her greatest ideal—democracy and liberty." So spoke the Most Reverend John Ireland, Archbishop of St. Paul, after the close of hostilities between the United States and Spain.

Similar words summarize the career of the archbishop. Democracy and liberty were his watchwords, and for them, as citizen, soldier, priest and prelate, he lived and fought through a measure of four-score years.

The son of an Irish carpenter, he was born in 1828. At the age of twelve he was a member of the first class of the Green Hills of Vermont. His early schooling was in a parochial school, and he later attended the St. Paul Seminary in St. Paul, Minn.

His father, a carpenter, was killed in 1850. The young man supported himself by working for a farmer. He soon after was employed by the St. Paul Seminary, and later by the St. Paul Seminary, and later by the St. Paul Seminary.

He was elected to the episcopate in 1875. Bishop Ireland, within a year accomplished the founding of a new Catholic diocese in western Minnesota, and soon afterwards established the Holy Trinity Seminary at Bemidji, Minn. He was the first bishop to establish a diocesan library, one of the most comprehensive in the Northwest. He became Archbishop of St. Paul in 1886.

Since his establishment as Metropolitan of that northwest ecclesiastical province the name of John Ireland has been ever prominent in public affairs, both church and nation. As a suggested candidate for cardinalate no American prelate was more often mentioned, and scarcely a question affecting the welfare of the nation found his voice silent or his pen idle.

Archbishop an Ardent Patriot
 Archbishop Ireland's strong Americanism, first put to the test when the Civil War began, was manifested at once when the United States entered the world conflict. No sooner had Congress formally declared war on Germany than the Archbishop called upon people of his faith to remember that they were Americans above all other things, and declared it their duty to help in every way.

Later, when occasion demanded, he advocated purchases of Liberty Bonds and contributions to the Red Cross and to various relief funds.

In this course he followed consistently part he took in a famous controversy which antedated his "Faribault plan," resulted from a petition made to come to create in the United States German parishes with parochial schools. As a suggested candidate for cardinalate no American prelate was more often mentioned, and scarcely a question affecting the welfare of the nation found his voice silent or his pen idle.

"The mass of our Catholics are Americans," he argued, "they resent any attempt to make them Irishmen or German or any other kind of foreigner. The bishops of America are fully able to ward off any foreign invasion in the church and to maintain it on thoroughly American lines." Later, on the same ground, he said:

"Our country is not a Poland to be partitioned at the good pleasure of foreigners. We have, under Peter's successor, our autonomy and for the sake of the American church and the American republic, we will retain autonomy."

As a moment in Archbishop Ireland stands the beautiful cathedral of St. Paul, on the brow of St. Anthony hill, overlooking the valley of the Mississippi and the thriving city whose growth from a rough frontier trading post to a city of 250,000 is the achievement of a people by its founder.

What the rebirth of a cardinalate would have been conferred upon the energetic and zealous Archbishop of St. Paul by Pope Pius X, is not known. For the St. Paul incident, many persons, within and without the Catholic Church, believe that Pope Benedict had been appointed Archbishop of St. Paul, in the announcement of the next conclave, is also common belief. But the foremost American prelate, in the public eye, died without attaining this preeminence in the United States with whom he enjoyed personal friendship.

The Bellamy-Storer-Roosevelt incident was an unfortunate outgrowth of such an acquiescence.

It dated back to 1893, when Theodore Roosevelt was governor of New York. He wanted to make St. Paul a Catholic, and was trying to induce the Vatican to create Archbishop Ireland a cardinal. The correspondence continued while Mr. Roosevelt was Vice President, and publication of portions after he became President. It involved the writer, with Mr. Roosevelt, in what was represented by his antagonists as an effort on the part of the President to interfere with ecclesiastical affairs.

Congress made inquiry into the matter. Mr. Storer, who had been appointed Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, in his statement, said he had told the Pope, at Mr. Roosevelt's request, that the appointment of Archbishop Ireland, would be gratifying to the President. The latter misrepresented his position to the Vatican, and had never been authorized to act officially. His letter, when sent, was signed by Storer upon his services, so intended. Mr. Storer was recalled in June. This closed the incident. Archbishop Ireland remained silent. At the next conclave, Archbishop Ireland of New York and Cardinal of Boston were made cardinals.

Nineteen years revived reports of the intended preferment for Archbishop Ireland, the latest, only a few days ago, announcing that Pope Benedict, in conversation, had spoken inadvertently of "Cardinal Ireland," and explaining the slip of the tongue, he declared that the appointment had been made "in petto" and was being withheld until the close of the war.

STATE DRAFT OFFICE HERE
 Murdock and Hammond to Establish Quarters in Philadelphia
 Major W. G. Murdock, State supervisor of draft, and Major Frank C. Hammond, medical aide to Governor Brumbaugh and head medical aide for the War Department at Pennsylvania, who have hitherto had offices with the State board at Harrisburg, are here to establish headquarters in Philadelphia.
 Major Murdock today explained that the so-called Emergency Fleet division of the War Department, in Philadelphia, has a list of names of men in the military service in that list be given either deferred classification on industrial grounds or classified as fit for military service.
 "This will not affect the skilled workmen in shipyards and munitions plants," he declared. Major Murdock, "but it will clean out the slackers and those unskilled men who are not needed in industry. They are in the army. The unskilled men will remain in Class I, while those absolutely necessary to the production of war essential will be given deferred classification."

MAYOR SCORNS THREAT OF SUIT OVER GUDEHUS

Smith Calls Playgrounds Association's Proposed Legal Action for Malfeasance "More Persecution"—Mallery and Gordon Seek Ground for Action

"It doesn't worry me any," Mayor Smith said today, in commenting on the action of the Playgrounds Association in ordering an investigation with a view to legal action against the Mayor for his methods in forcing the resignation of the Board of Recreation when it refused to appoint E. B. Gudehus as supervisor of playgrounds.
 "Just a little more persecution, that's all," said the Mayor.
 Otto T. Mallery, treasurer of the Playgrounds Association, today conferred with former Judge James Gordon to conduct the investigation to determine if there is basis for action.
 Both Mr. Mallery and Judge Gordon refused to give the result of their conference, but Mr. Mallery said a statement would be issued within forty-eight hours.
 Mr. Mallery consulted Attorney Gordon at the request of officers and directors of the Playgrounds Association. At a meeting yesterday they called for the arrest and prosecution of the Mayor if grounds for a charge of misdemeanor in office shall be found.
 The appointment of Gudehus was the first action of the new Board of Recreation after it was selected. Gudehus, former secretary to Senator Vare, was the Mayor's personal choice for the position.
 Among the members of the Playgrounds Association who urged Mr. Mallery to consult counsel regarding the methods used by the Mayor were Marshall S. Morgan, acting treasurer of the association; Miss Mary Blakiston, vice president; Isaac C. Sutton and Mrs. E. W. Clark, who presented to the city the Happy Hollow playgrounds.
 Members of the Recreation Board who were ousted appeared before the association and told of private conversations with the Mayor in which he expressed his firm determination to "take care of Gudehus," and threatened to fire him unless it agreed to name him. Former Senator Ernest I. Tustin and Rabbi Henry Berkeowitz related the story of the methods of the Mayor and the Civil Service Commission to make possible their desires.
 Rabbi Berkeowitz admitted that much of the Mayor's political talk about "taking care of friends" "political promises" and so forth was incomprehensible to him. The rabbi declared the Mayor used "cheap talk."
 "Then," said he, "when I was amazed at his utterances I went to see Miss Ross. She said, 'It does not matter; the fact is you do not talk nor understand his language.'"

 HOUSE RECESS PLANS CHOOSES OFFICERS

Maneuvering Needed to Surmount Them—Suffrage Up in Senate Tomorrow

Dr. Cyrus Lee Stevens Elected President of Pennsylvania Organization

Washington, Sept. 25.—House leaders today were making a list of obstacles in their heading rush to start a thirty-day vacation for campaign purposes at the end of the week.

Unless the managers can do some very adroit maneuvering, the whole recess plan today threatened to go to smash.

A renewed effort was made in the House today by Chairman Sims, of the Interstate Commerce Committee, to secure speedy passage of the emergency power bill. He pointed out that President Wilson, Secretary Baker and other administration officials regard the bill as of paramount importance as a war measure.

The suffrage situation in the Senate today is virtually the reverse of that existing when the Federal amendment came up for action in the Senate. Secretary of the Senate, Dr. H. C. Rogers, third vice president, Dr. Wesley Kunkle, fourth vice president, Dr. W. T. Donahoe, Pittsburgh, Pa., assistant secretary, Dr. J. P. Longacker, treasurer, Dr. J. W. Waggoner, Johnstown, Pa.
 It was decided that the meeting next Saturday and will continue until October 18.

ROBBED BY UNIFORMED BANDIT
 West Philadelphia Attacked by Motor Highwayman

Three automobile bandits, one uniformed as a United States army private, attacked and robbed H. Baker, 4728 Wallace street, last night at Fifty-second street and Springfield avenue. Baker reported to the police. He said he was walking down Fifty-second street when a touring car drew up to the curb. An occupant alighted and he permitted a postponement of the vote. Today the anti-suffragist is refusing a vote for Senator La Follette, a pro-suffragist, who is at the bedside of his son in California.

twice the amount of that in the second and third loans and more than three times the quota in the first loan.

The first loan allotment of $110,000,000 was oversubscribed by $92,359,250. The second allotment of $50,000,000 was oversubscribed by $30,250,250, and in the third loan the oversubscription of the $50,000,000 total was $111,965,500.

In announcing the $6,000,000,000 loan total Secretary McAdoo in New York last night emphasized that "we cannot look the Kaiser" unless this amount shall be subscribed. He pointed out that in the last loan 18,000,000 Americans had subscribed to the bonds.

Organizations are mobilizing their strength and individuals are working industriously in preparing for the fourth loan campaign, which is to be vigorously prosecuted. Preparations are virtually completed for the great pageant which will open the drive on Saturday.

Charles M. Schwab will lead the Emergency Fleet workers in the pageant. Owing to the large number of marchers expected, this contingent has been limited to 200, including men and women.

One attractive feature of the shipbuilders' section will be a half dozen boats, one of which will show a riveting gang at work and another a skeleton ship.
