VIND-UP AT OLYMPIA WAS AS POPULAR AS A CRY FOR HELP AT A MEETING OF PACIFISTS BARTFIELD SHADES M'CARRON IN SLOW

BATTLE AT OLYMPIA Boxers Perform Like Pair of Charter Members of Absent Home Guards and Put on One of Those Things in Wind-Up

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL Sports Editor Evening Public Leager

ONE of shore things was perpetrated at the Olympia A. A. last night. when Soldier Bartfield, once a bold, brave fighting man in our army, waltzed and hesitated six cantes with Jack McCarron, one of our mariners on the briny deep. It was a great spectacle, which satisfied every one except the customers, eash and otherwise. The army was very careful not to injure the fighting strength of the mays, and the navy was likewise coniderate of the army. Some sort of a battle was fought, but their fighting arms evidently had been checked at the gate or left in the dressing room,

It's a shame to even think of handing out a decision, but if it belos the cause we are of the opinion that Bartfield is entitled to whatever glory there was. He didn't miss as often as McCarron and made a stronger finish. Also be didn't clinch very much, because his opponent invariably

Everything was lovely, and a pleasant time was being had by all until wind-up appeared. Then it rained on the picnic. Met'arren and Bartfield looked like a pair of fighting persons vapable of causing some excitement, but their act went floole after the first minute of lutiess boxing. They would stand off and spar like two ferocious shadow boxers, then misa couple of wild swings and fall into close embrace. Some said those things were clinches, but they seemed too sincere The boys couldn't get going, and acted like charter members of the beent home guard. They couldn't work together, and everything they tried went flat. After the first chapter the spectators attempted to speci them up by whistling popular airs, but even that failed. It got so bad that Harry Smiler, the most loyal rooter to fown, gave it up as a had Joh at BARTFIELD'S eye was out in the fourth, but experts neured he must have bumped into one of the ring posts. McCarron also was bleeding in the sixth, but no one knows how the weetdent hap pened. A lot of useless gove was spilled, but that onve the act same

They Thought Every Round Was the First

IN THE first round the battlers got by in swell shape, for it is customary to spar for an opening and study one's opponent before getting down to real hard work. Had the bout ended then and there no one would have known the difference and every one would have been satisfied. However, Bartfield and McCarron evidently forgot the dope they gathered in the opening stanza, for they continued to study each other and spar for an opening which couldn't have been found with a telescope. The second round was like the first, the fourth like the second and in the lifth it was more McCarron forgot himself temporarily in the third when he started a wild swing which failed to miss Bartfield, but soaked him on the chin, but the Soldier easily weathered the storm. He fell into a long clinch and stepped out of danger.

It was in the fourth that Bartfield received a cut over his right eye. This must have been an old wound, for it was impossible to put over any gory stuff on the wised-up audience at this juncture. In the sixth McCarron was suffering from a similar injury, and even the Soldier was surprised when he saw it. Taking it all in all, it was more of a wrestling bout, but the boys were handicapped because they were gloves,

One little incident brought a big laugh from the crowd. At the beginng of the sixth round the boxers shook hands, but this was unnecessary, ecause the boys already had shown evidences of strong friendship.

THEIR little act went as big as a cry for help in a meeting of hard-boiled pacifists.

Semiwind-Up Was a Thrilling Affair

DERHAPS the cause of the bum wind-up was the sensational bout which preceded it. In the semi Sammy Schiff, the hard-working battler. managed exclusively by the peerless Sammy Hahn, met Young Robidean, and finished second after six streauous sessions. Schiff, who is a left-hander and possesses a long reach, started out like a house aftre, and for two rounds oked like a sure winner. He kept Robideau at a respectful distance with his long right jab and inflicted some damage at close quarters.

In the third, however, Sammy forgot the words of advice poured into his ear by Manager Hahn and, while he was looking over at his adviser, Robidean leaned heavily against his law. This was a wild wallon and although it stung. Sammy remained on his feet until the bell. But it was leaning against the ropes and shot over a nicely timed right-hand wallop, which landed flush on the whiskers, and Schiff sagged to the floor outside the ropes and almost fell into the lap of Jimmy the Elk. Jimmy handed out some timely advice, which was to hug the canvas for a count of eight and then arise for further punishment. Sammy did as he was told, while his manager extricated himself from the water bucket.

Another slam on the chin sent Schiff to the mai for a second time, but he bobbed up again and lingered through the round. In the fifth he managed to avoid the majority of swings burled at him, and in the sixth came back strong and was fighting hard at the bell. Robideau won the bout

N the other bouts Joe Mendell won from Battling Mack in siz rounds, Willie (Kid) Wolf defeated Bobby Burman, and Sammy

Freeman knocked out Benny Minster in the third. . . .

Jack Hanlon Resigns as Matchmaker of Olympia WAS announced last night that Jack Hanlon, matchmaker of the Olmypia, had resigned his position and his place would be filled by George Engle. Hanlon has been with the club five years and leaves with a wonderful record. He used every champion, with the exception of Jess Willard, seldom made up a poor card. Hanlon's reputation extends throughout the country, and already other clubs are bidding for his services.

He quit his job because of a difference in salary, brought about by war tions. Harry Edwards, president of the club, paid Hanlon a glowing tribute when he ranked him with the best matchmakers in the country,

George Engle, Hanlon's successor, is known in the United States and Europe as a fight manager. He took Frank Klaus to Paris several years ago, and when he returned joined Benny Leonard's training camp. He has nded the lightweight champion in all of his battles, and is responsible, in a way, for his success.

Bushnell said that no matter what happened to Franklin and Marshall the opening game of the 1918 season would be played this coming Saturday. If F and M. falls to met an eleven, there is a possibility of a game with the League Island Marines, who are being coached by By Dickson, the former Penn tutor, if the Sea Soldiers cannot arrange for a contest and no other team is avail-by By Dickson, the form of the chief differences as they first the Sea Soldiers cannot arrange for a contest and no other team is available, a regular battle will be wased believes the transport of drives, is that in the case of the hard altitude the ball leaves the club at a greater volocity, that it rises more the contest of the first the ball to the contest of the contest of the first the ball to the contest of the first the ball to the contest of the suickly at the beginning of its flight and that its carry is completed much sconer. In fact, it has been calculated that while the flight of the ball in this case often occupies no more than four or five seconds, it is as much as six or seven when properly driven—that is with the aid of 'underspin.'"

Professor Tait pointed out that what is wanted in order to make the ball fly a long way when hit with reasonable force is "lime to travel"; that is, some means by which the force of gravity might be discounted for the time being, and it is the underpoin that does this and gives the ball a longer time in the air for its velocity or forward motion
