Lieut. Armstrong Wounded When One Assailant Hits Petrol Tank

GETS THREE OF ENEMY

One Brought Down in Flames, But Without Witness. So Credit Is Lost

Shooting down German airplanes and being severely wounded in a fight with four of them is treated as a matter of small moment in his letters by First Lieutenant William J. Armstrong...

Lieutenant Armstrong tells of thrilling exploits so briefly that his father is unable to determine how many enemy planes he has shot down...

Lieutenant Armstrong was graduated from the Catholic High School for Boys and was in partnership with his father in Thomas J. Armstrong & Co., painters when he was wounded.

The latest letter was written from the American base hospital in England, where he was recovering from wounds.

EVERYTHING O. K.

Here is how he speaks of these wounds: "Just a line to let you know everything is going all right. I arrived over here on Tuesday and am getting along fine..."

Real Sport "It was funny the way I got hit. There were only four Huns on me, and while I would be firing on one of them the other three would be turning on me..."

It was an explosive bullet, and it exploded in my petrol tank. Why my plane didn't catch fire I can't understand...

Now, I was at 12,000 feet when I got hit, so I drifted down to 10,000 feet, and not seeing the Huns, I switched on to my gravity tank which is just for such emergencies...

This happened at 11 a. m. and by 4 that night I was out of the ether and now I am walking around here having a good time.

MAJOR MACKENDRICK TELLS OF U. S. DRIVE

Infantry Eats Germans Alive, Norwood Man Writes to Friend

"Some Prussian guard prisoners, captured the other day, said they did not believe there were only a million Americans on the line," wrote Major Robert G. Mackendrick...

"The Prussians said they had talked it over with German friends from other parts of the line and decided there must be at least 10,000,000 Americans, judging from the way they fight."

Major Mackendrick, a brigade adjutant of artillery, pays high tribute to the Yankee infantry.

Prisoners Dejected

"Prisoners are sure dejected. Say the Germans know they can't win, but are only fighting to keep the French, American and English out of Germany."

"The French people are wonderful, the more their property and relatives are destroyed the more they smile and go cheerfully about rebuilding."

"I tell you, he should be in the field artillery with us, but a 155 shell sure shows up the boys."

Advanced Twenty Miles

"We have advanced twenty miles across a country completely ruined by the Hun. Just imagine fifty towns the size of Malvern a Main Line town of 5000 inhabitants, every roof fallen in, floors smashed down, all the furniture wrecked and every bit of lead and brass taken, and you have a picture of what we pressed through coming up here."

'Treat 'Em Rough!' We're speaking of fabrics, not fighters. Of Perry Fall and Winter Suits, Fall and Winter Overcoats.

'Treat 'em rough!' That's what the woollens and worsteds in them are made to stand for!

Substance, Solidity, Soundness are their middle names.

The fine finished worsteds in some of these Suits are the peers of anything that has ever been woven, with improvements in pattern designs and good looks.

Nappy unfinished worsteds; pliant cassimeres; rough chevots; new overcoatings; big, comfy beavers that feel like soft and silken down when you close your fingers over them—these are some of our contributions for Men's comfort and appearance this Fall and Winter.

They stand up to our own highest ideals, and they'll like it when you treat 'em rough!
