GRIP SPARES INFANTS, DR. KRUSEN DECLARES

While Malady Attacks Adults Ruthlessly, No Patient Under One Year of Age Has Been Reported to the Health Department

No alarm need be felt for the safety of infants during the influenza epidemic. That was the comforting advice given today to tens of thousands of parents in this city by Director Krusen, of the Department of Health and Charities.

The history of influenza, the Director said, shows that the course of an epidemic usually runs from four to six weeks.

Dr. Krusen is commenting on the liability of children to the disease, said he has heard of no cases under one year of age.
