HIGH COAL PRICES Bag Sales Average $17 for Nut and $14 for Pea

and $14 for Pea

Prices equivalent to $17.02 a ton for nut coal and $14.34 a ton for pea coal have been authorized for dealers retailing coal in twenty-five-pound bags.

The new scale of prices announced by Francis A. Lewis, local fuel administrator, allows nut coal in weights of twenty-five-pounds to be sold for nine-teen cents and hea coal, in similar weights, to retail for sixteen vents. Nut coal in buckets containing ten pounds is to sell for thirteen cents a bucket, or $29.12 a ton, while hea coal sold by the bucket is to sell for eleven cents.

These higher prices are authorized because of the high percentage of expense involved in retailing coal in such small quantities. Peddlers will be allowed to charge three cents a bucket more than the prices amounced. Mr. Lewis said, because their expenses are higher than storekeepers.

The Rev. F. L. Patton to Lecture Here The Rev. Francis L.
