Oyster Bay, N. Y., Oct. 25.

Theodore Roosevelt has sent duplicate copies of his fourteen-point peace plan to the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Characterized as "thoroughly mischievous" by many of the fourteen points, the plan is a peace offer based on unconditional surrender of Germany.

It also declares against the adoption of the President's address of last January as offering a basis for a peace satisfactory to the United States.

to Party Workers

Washington, Oct. 25.

Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, today gave out the following statement:

"Masquerading as a war measure, an act to regulate the handling and sale of explosives during the period of the war was enacted by Congress and approved October 6, 1917. The actual purpose of this act, as revealed by its operation, was to furnish jobs for deserving Democrats."

"Under its terms, the President has appointed in each State and Territory of the United States a Federal inspector of explosives at a salary of $2,100 a year. In addition, there has been created a horde of minor officials and agents of the Bureau of Mines, among these latter being an investigating agent in each State, a collector of taxes on the sale and use of explosives, a collector of a fee for the issuance of each license amounting to twenty-five cents."

WAR MEASURE A POTENTIAL

Objection was raised to the bill on the ground that it created a horde of officials unnecessarily; that State laws already covered the subject, and that the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice already had sufficient force to handle all investigations that might arise.

The Democratic reply to these arguments was that this is a war measure and that business men are willing to accept the possible harassment of a new set of officials because of the war necessity. That State laws are not uniform and that investigations upon the handling of explosives should be handled by men more technically qualified.
