

MOVING FORWARD WITH THE INTREPID YANKEE DOUGHBOYS TOWARDS THE RHINE COUNTRY

ONE OF AMERICA'S HEAVIES, hauled to the front by a tractor.

PHOTOS © COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC INFORMATION

WHEN THE YANKS STORMED JUVIGNY—Tanks moving up to the support of the French troops that operated on the left of the American forces at the capture of the village of Juvigny.

"BOOMERANG" MACHINE GUNS—Boche machine guns captured on the Vesle turned over for repairs to the Yankee repair shops. These men put the guns in working order and ship them back to the firing line to be turned on the enemy. The man on the right is not a German prisoner, but simply a "Yank" in possession of a boche helmet.

DOING THEIR BEST, TOO, IN WINNING THE WAR

THE FIGGERY AT CAMP MILLS, LONG ISLAND—The garbage of the army camps is not wasted, but is used in feeding the army pig.

© COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC INFORMATION

(In circle above) MUTT, A FAMOUS Y. M. C. A. CANINE—Mutt runs back and forth to the trenches from the supply depots with cigarettes, tied to his back for the fighting Yanks. The photograph immediately above shows a dog team used in the French army for hauling machine guns and cartridges.

THIS BELGIAN AND HIS SON, owners of a dog and pigeon farm on Long Island, devote their time to training pigeons and dogs for war purposes as dispatch bearers. The photograph shows the little cages for carrying the birds and the method of strapping them on the back or wearing in front.

SOMETIMES SOLDIERS MUST REMAIN FOR DAYS IN SHELL-HOLES IN NO MAN'S LAND, with every way of escape cut off. In such cases the dog has proved himself the best means of reaching such men with food and ammunition.